CHAPTER II.—Continued.

Her voice is sweet and clear, a little petulant perhaps, but still very sweet. She is quite small—a little girl—and clad in deep mourning. There is something pathetic about the dense black surrounding such a radiant face, and such a childish figure. Her eyes are fixed on the professor, and there is evident anxiety in their hazel depths; her soft lips are parted; she seems hesitating as if not knowing whether she shall smile or sigh. She has raised both her hands as if unconsciously, and is holding them clasped against her breast. The pretty fingers are covered with costly rings. Altogether she makes a picture—this little girl, with her brilliant eyes, and mutinous mouth, and soft black clinging gown. Dainty-sweet she looks, "Sweet as is the bramble-flower."

"Yes," says the professor, in a hesitating way, as if by no means certain of the fact. He is so vague about it, indeed, that "some one's" dark eyes take a mischievous gleam.

"Are you sure?" says she, and looks up at him suddenly, a little sideways, perhaps, as if half-frightened, and gives way to a naughty sort of little laugh. It rings through the room, this laugh, and has the effect of frightening her altogether this time. She checks herself, and looks first down at the carpet, with the big roses on it, where one little foot is wriggling in a rather nervous way, and then up again at the professor, as if to see if he is thinking bad things of her. She sighs softly.

"Have you come to see me or Aunt Jane?" asks she; "because Aunt Jane is out—I'm glad to say"—this last pianissimo.

"To see you," says the professor absently. He is thinking! He has taken her hand and held it, and dropped it again, all in a state of high bewilderment.

Is this the big, strong, noisy girl of his imaginings? The bouncing creature with untidy hair, and her clothes pitchforked on to her?

"Well—I hoped so," says she, a little wistfully, as it seems to him, every trace of late sauciness now gone, and with it the sudden shyness. After many days the professor grows accustomed to these sudden transitions that are puzzling, yet so enchanting, these rapid, inconsequent, but always lovely changes. "From grave to gay, from lively to severe."

"Won't you sit down?" says his small hostess, gently touching a chair near her with her slim fingers.

"Thank you," says the professor, and then stops short.

"You are—"

"Your ward," says she ever so gently, yet emphatically. It is plain that she is now on her very best behavior. She smiles up at him in a very encouraging way. "And you are my guardian, aren't you?"

"Yes," says the professor, with enthusiasm. He has seated himself, not on the chair she has pointed out to him, but on a very distant lounge. He is conscious of a feeling of growing terror. This lovely child has created it, yet why, or how? Was ever guardian mastered by a ward before? A desire to escape is filling him, but he has got to do his duty to his dead friend, and this is part of it.

He has retired to the far-off lounge with a view to using it as distantly as possible. In this poor subterfuge fails him. Miss Wynter, picking up a milking stool, advances leisurely toward him, reclining herself upon it just in front of him, crosses her hands over her knees, and looks expectantly up at him with a charming smile.

"Now we can have a good talk," says she.

Your aunt."

"That's nothing—nothing at all—even a guardian is better than that. And you are my guardian. "Why,"—coming closer to him and pressing five soft little fingers in an almost feverish fashion upon his arm, "why can't you take me away?"

"I!"

"Yes, yes, you," she comes even nearer to him, and the pressure of the small fingers grows more eager—there is something in them now that might well be termed coaxing. "Do," says she.

"Oh! Impossible!" says the professor.

The color mounts to his brow. He almost shakes off the little clinging fingers in his astonishment and agitation. Has she no common sense—no knowledge of the things that be?

She has drawn back from him and is regarding him somewhat strangely.

"Impossible to leave Aunt Jane!" asks she. It is evident she has not altogether understood and yet is feeling puzzled. Well," defiantly, "we shall see!"

"Why don't you like your Aunt Jane?" asks the professor, distractedly. He doesn't feel nearly as fond of his dead friend as he did an hour ago.

"Because," lucidly, "she is Aunt Jane. If she were your Aunt Jane you would know."

"But, my dear—"

"I really wish," interrupts Miss Wynter, petulantly, "you wouldn't call me 'my dear.' Aunt Jane calls me that when she is going to say something horrid to me. Papa—"she pauses suddenly and tears rush to her dark eyes.

"Yes. What of your father?" asks the professor, hurriedly, the tears raising terror in his soul."

You knew him—speak to me of him," says she, a little tremulously.

"I knew him well indeed. He was very good to me, when—when I was younger. I was very fond of him."

"He was good to everyone," said Miss Wynter, staring hard at the professor. It is occurring to her that this grave sedate man with his glasses could never have been younger. He must always have been older than the gay, handsome, debonair father, who had been so dear to her.

"What are you going to tell me about him?" asks the professor, gently.

"Only what he used to call me—Doatie! I suppose," wistfully, "you couldn't call me that?"

"I am afraid not," says the professor, coloring even deeper.

"I'm sorry," says she, her young mouth taking a sorrowful curve. "But don't call me Miss Wynter, at all events, or 'my dear.' I do so want some one to call me by my Christian name," says the poor child, sadly.

"Perpetua—is it not?" says the professor, ever so kindly.

"No—Pet," corrects she. "It's shorter, you know, and far easier to say."

"Oh!" says the professor. To him it seems very difficult to say. Is it possible she is going to ask him to call her by that familiar—almost affectionate—name? The girl must be mad.

"Yes, much easier," says Perpetua; "you will find that out, after a bit, when you have got used to calling me by it. Are you going now, Mr. Curzon? Going so soon?"

"I have classes," says the professor.

"Students?" says she. You teach them? I wish I was a student. I shouldn't have been given over to Aunt Jane, then, or," with a rather wilful laugh, "if I had been I should have led her, oh!" rapturously, "such a life!"

It suggests itself to the professor that she is quite capable of doing that now, though she is not of the male sex.

"Good-by," says he, holding out his dead, to-day being Wednesday in the heart of June, he may be seen sitting bolt upright in a hansom on his way to the unlovely house that holds Miss Jane Majendie.

As he enters the dismal drawing-room, where he finds Miss Majendie and her niece, it becomes plain, even to his inexperienced brain, that there has just been a row on, somewhere.

Perpetua is sitting on a distant lounge, her small vivacious face one thunder-cloud. Miss Majendie, sitting on the hardest chair this hideous room contains, is smiling. A terrible sign. The professor pales before it.

"I am glad to see you, Mr. Curzon," says Miss Majendie, rising and extending a bony hand. "As Perpetua's guardian, you may perhaps have some influence over her. I say 'perhaps' advisedly, as I scarcely dare to hope any one could influence a mind so distorted as hers."

"What is it?" asks the professor, nervously—of Perpetua, not of Miss Majendie.

"I'm dull," says Perpetua, sullenly.

The professor glances keenly at the girl's downcast face, and then at Miss Majendie. The latter glance is a question.

"You hear her," says Miss Majendie coldly—she draws her shawl round her meagre shoulders and a breath through her lean nostrils that may be heard. "Perhaps you may be able to discover her meaning."

"What is it?" asks the professor, turning to the girl, his tone anxious, uncertain. Young women, with "wrongs" are unknown to him, as are all other sorts of young women for the matter of that. And this particular young woman looks a little unsafe at the present moment.

"I have told you! I am tired of this life. I am dull—stupid. I want to go out." Her lovely eyes are flashing, her face is white—her lips trembling.

"Take me out," says she, suddenly.

"Perpetual!" exclaims Miss Majendie. "How unmaidenly! How immodest!"

Perpetua looks at her with large, surprised eyes.

"Why?" says she.

"I really think," interrupts the professor, hurriedly, who sees breakers ahead, "if I were to take Perpetua for a walk—a drive—to—er—to some place or other—it might destroy this ennui of which she complains. If you will allow her to come out with me for an hour or so, I—"

"If you are waiting for my sanction, Mr. Curzon, to that extraordinary proposal you will wait some time," says Miss Majendie, slowly, frigidly. She draws the shawl still closer and sniffs again.

"But—"

"There is no 'But,' sir. The subject doesn't admit of argument. In my young days, and I should think,—scrutinizing him exhaustively through her glasses, "in yours, it was not customary for a young gentlewoman to go out walking, alone, with a man!" If she had said with a famished tiger, she couldn't have thrown more horror into her tone.

The professor had shrunk a little from that classing of her age with his, but has now found matter for hope in it.

REMOVING THE ROYAL DEAD.

Great Changes Being Made in the Mausoleum at Windsor Castle.

Never since King George III. built for himself and his children the underground mausoleum among the foundations of Windsor Castle has there been so much life, if not bustle, amid the tombs of the kings and queens and royal personages as there is now.

HOUSEHOLD.

SOME GOOD RECIPES.

Steamed Oysters.—Select three or four large oysters, put on to drain, heat pan hot, put in piece of butter size of an egg, let brown, add oysters, w dash of pepper, celery salt if needed, steam five minutes; add few sprigs parsley, chopped fine, and serve on dishes with banquet wafers.

Turkey Soup.—Take the turkey bone and boil one hour and a quarter water enough to cover them. Add little summer savory and celery, chop fine. Just before serving thicken with a little flour, browned, and a son with salt, pepper and a small piece of butter. This is a cheap but good soup, using the remains of cold turkey which might otherwise be thrown away.

Mince Meat.—One pound finely chopped boiled beef, one half pound chop suet, a pound each of stoned raisins and of currants, a pound of citron, a pound of sugar, one half teaspoonful of salt, also add the juice and grated rind of two oranges and one lemon mixed with a half pint of cider, an half pint each of brandy and sherry, and a teaspoonful each of ground cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg and mace, and three pounds of finely chopped apples.

Raisin Pie.—One cup of sugar, one cup of seeded raisins, one cup of sweet cream juice of one lemon and yolk of one egg. Chop raisins fine and bake crust, white of one egg beaten and add tablespoonful of sugar for meringue. Then sit in oven until it becomes a golden brown.

Hickory Nut Macaroons.—Beat whites of three eggs to a froth, add slowly one cupful of pulverized sugar and one cupful of nuts chopped fine. Mix thoroughly and drop on buttered tin and bake slowly.

French Cream Custard.—One quart of milk, four eggs, five tablespoonfuls sugar, four tablespoonfuls cornstarch. When milk is at a boil point add eggs and sugar beaten together; thicken with the cornstarch dissolved in a little milk; flavor with vanilla. When cold line dish with lady fingers or sponge cake, pour the custard and serve with whipped cream.

RUBBER PLANTS.

Both sides of the leaves should be sponged frequently, using soapy water. The most likely insect to attack the leaves is that little black fly known as thrips, which is does damage.

The growth of a rubber plant has the tendency to extend as one's only, and very handsome plants formed, while they remain within a length of four feet. Young stock however, be topped at an early stage and this will cause lateral growth break, two or three of which can be allowed to extend for forming plants a more bushy habit. This is chiefly a matter of taste, and adapted in case where numbers of plants are grown. Turfy loam, leaf soil, sand and charcoal, with the addition of a little peat form an excellent compost. Plants have been growing very well the few months may now require a little more care so that they will establish before winter and the roots filled with roots. Pot firmly, making the material as substantial as the base roots. The pots ought to be clean and well drained.

Apply water in sufficient quantity to pass right through the ball of roots and wait until more is needed.

CHAPTER III.

"And if you dreamed how a friend's smile,
And nearness soothe a heart that's sore,
You might be moved to stay awhile
Before my door."

"About?" begins the professor, and stammers, and ceases.

"Everything," says she, with a little nod. "It is impossible to talk to Aunt Jane. She doesn't talk, she only argues, and always wrongly. But you are different, I can see that. Now tell me,"—she leans even more forward and looks intently at the professor, her pretty brows wrinkled as if with extreme and troublous thought— "What are the duties of a guardian?"

"Eh?" says the professor. He moves his glasses up to his forehead and then pulls them down again. Did ever anxious student ask him question so difficult of answer as this one—that this small maiden has propounded?

"You can think it over," says she, most graciously. "There is no hurry and I am quite aware that one isn't made a guardian every day. Do you think you could make it out while I count forty?"

"I think I could make it out more quickly if you didn't count at all," says the professor, who is growing warm. "The duties of a guardian—er—er—to see that one's ward is comfortable and happy."

"Then there is a great deal of duty for you to do," says she solemnly, letting her chin slip into the hollow of her hand.

"I know—I'm sure of it," says the professor with a sigh that might be called a groan. "But your aunt, Miss Majendie—your mother's sister—can—"

"I don't believe she's my mother's sister," says Miss Wynter, calmly. "I have seen my mother's picture. It is lovely! Aunt Jane was a changeling—I'm sure of it. But never mind her. You were going to say—"

"That Miss Majendie, who is virtually your guardian—can explain it all to you much better than I can."

"Aunt Jane is not my guardian!" The mild look of inquiry changes to one of light anger. The white brow contracts. "And certainly she could never make one happy and comfortable. Well—what else?"

"She will look after—"

"I told you I don't care about Aunt Jane. Tell me what you can do—"

"See that your fortune is not—"

"I don't care about my fortune, either," with a little gesture. "But I do care about my happiness. Will you see to that?"

"Of course," says the professor gravely.

"Then you will take me away from Aunt Jane!" The small vivacious face is now all aglow. "I am not happy with Aunt Jane. I—clasping her hands, and letting a quick, vindictive fire light her eyes—"I hate Aunt Jane. She says things about poor people that—Oh! how I hate her!"

"But—you shouldn't—you really should not. I feel certain you ought not," says the professor, growing vaguer every moment.

"Ought I not?" with a quick little laugh that is all anger and no mirth. "I do though, for all that! I"—pausing and regarding him, with a somewhat tragic air, that sits most firmly upon her—am not going to stay here much longer!"

"What?" says the professor aghast. "But, my dear—Miss Wynter, I'm afraid you must."

"Why? What is she to me?"

not by that familiar—almost direction—name? The girl must be mad.

"Yes, much easier," says Perpetua, "you will find that out, after a bit, when you have got used to calling me by it. Are you going now, Mr. Curzon? Going so soon?"

"I have classes," says the professor.

"Students?" says she. You teach them? I wish I was a student. I shouldn't have been given over to Aunt Jane, then, or, with a rather wilful laugh, "if I had been I should have led her, oh!" rapturously, "such a life!"

It suggests itself to the professor that she is quite capable of doing that now, though she is not of the male sex.

"Good-by," says he, holding out his hand.

"You will come soon again?" demands she, laying her own in it.

Next week—perhaps."

"Not till then? I shall be dead then," says she with a rather mirthless laugh this time. "Do you know that you and Aunt Jane are the only two people in all London whom I know?"

"That is terrible," says he, quite sincerely.

"Yes. Isn't it?"

"But soon you will know people. Your aunt has acquaintances. They—surely they will call; they will see you—they—"

"Will take an overwhelming fancy to me? just as you have done," says she, with a quick, rather curious light in her eyes, and a tilting of her pretty chin. "There, go," says she. "I have some work to do, and you have your classes. It would never do for you to miss them. And as for next week—make it next month! I wouldn't for the world be a trouble to you in any way."

"I shall come next week," says the professor, troubled in some wise by the meaning in her eyes. What is it?

Simple loneliness, or misery downright? How young she looks—what a child! That tragic air does not belong to her of right. She should be all laughter, and lightness and mirth—

"As you will," says she; her tone has grown almost haughty; there is a sense of remorse in his breast as he goes down the stairs. Had he been kind to old Wynter's child? Has he been true to his trust? There had been an expression that might almost determine despair in the young face as he left her. Her face, with that expression on it, haunts him all down the road.

Yes. He will call next week. What day is this? Friday. And Friday next he is bound to deliver a lecture somewhere—he is not sure where, but certainly somewhere. Well, Saturday then he might call. But that—

Why not call Thursday—or even Wednesday?

Wednesday let it be. He needn't call every week, but he had said something about calling next week, and—she wouldn't care, of course—but one should keep their word. What a strange little face she has—and strange manners, and—able to get on evidently with her present surroundings.

What an old devil that aunt must be.

CHAPTER IV.

"Dear, if you knew what tears they shed,

Who live apart from home and friend,

To pass my house, by pity led,

Your steps would tend."

He makes the acquaintance of the latter very shortly. But requires no spoon to sup with her, was Miss Majendie's invitations to supper, or indeed to luncheon, breakfast or dinner, are so few and rare that it might be rash for a hungry man to count on them.

The professor... has felt it to be his duty to call on his ward regularly every week, has learned to know and, I regret to say, to loathe that estimable spinster christened Jane Majendie.

After every visit to her house he has sworn to himself that "this one" shall be the last, and every Wednesday following he has gone again. In-

THE ROYAL DEAD.

Great Changes Being Made in the Mausoleum at Windsor Castle.

Never since King George III. built for himself and his children the underground mausoleum among the foundations of Windsor Castle has there been so much life, if not bustle, amid the tombs of the kings and queens and royal personages as there is now.

The coffins with the remains of George III., George IV., William IV., the Duke of Kent, the Duke of York, Princess Octavius and Alfred, children of George III., removed from Westminster Abbey; the Duchess of Brunswick, the Princesses Charlotte and Elizabeth, children of William IV.; Queen Charlotte, Princess Charlotte, Princess Amelia, Queen Adelaide, Princess Augusta, King George V., of Hanover, and last of all the present Duchess of York's mother, the Duchess of Cambridge, are being moved from where they lay to make room for those who are inevitably follow in the years that are to come.

The royal sepulchre, which is situated directly beneath St. George's Chapel and the Royal memorial chapel at Westminster Castle, is one of the places to which no member of the public is ever admitted. Some one of the royal family may pay an occasional visit; some few, very few, privileged persons have at times been known to have their curiosity satisfied, but from the public eye the place is kept secret.

Even by those who have been permitted to descend the stairs and pass through the gates into the presence of the visit could not be called inspiring.

First of all there was the getting down—no easy matter even with the required permission; and there is no wonder the visitors were few, except when the sepulchre had to be opened to receive a new inmate. Heavy iron plates which guarded the stone stair that led down into the vaults had to be removed.

The bottom gained, nothing more was visible for a time, but the heavy gloom all the more weird by the dim light given by one or two sickly candles and the lantern carried by the watchman. Gradually, as the eyes accustomed themselves to the light, or rather the darkness, one began to distinguish massive octagonal pillars, supporting what seemed a vaulted roof. Down the centre ran a long stone table, and round the sides some shelves, upon which rested strange dark things that did not, in the gloom, look what they really were—the coffins containing the dust and ashes of long since departed royalties.

To discover who lay there the privileged visitor had to explore with the aid of the lantern and peer into the inscriptions on the tombs. Cool, silent,

BOER NAMES.

The origin of the names of some of the towns in Cape Colony and Natal which are at present so prominently attracting public attention, is of interest. Durban is named from Sir Benjamin Durban, who was Governor of the Cape in 1834. Grahamstown and Harrismith are named respectively from military commanders—Colonel Graham and Colonel Sir Harry Smith, Caledon, Beaufort, Somerset and Cradock are named from former Governors. The towns of Ladysmith, Port Elizabeth and Lady Grey are called after the wives of Cape Governors. Kimberley is named after the Earl of Kimberley, who was Colonel Secretary from 1870 to 1874, when that town advanced from the position of a mushroom camp to that of a permanent mining center.

break, two or three of which can be allowed to extend for forming a more busy habit. This is the chief matter of taste, and adapted in where numbers of plants are grown.

Turfy loam, leaf soil, sand and coal, with the addition of a little form an excellent com post. Plants have been growing freely the few months may now require a soil that they will be established before winter and the roots filled with water. Pot firmly, making the material as substantial as the roots. The pots ought to be clearly drained.

Apply water in sufficient quantity to pass right through the ball of soil and wait until more is needed. After potting one good watering suffice for some time, but when pots are becoming well occupied roots water is needed oftener. A light, but not a sunny position, the India rubber plant best, and house or window is hot, shade be afforded during the hottest part of the day. Sour soil through errors in watering is the cause of the lower leaves turning yellow before they ought to. It is natural for the lower leaves to fall when they do the leaf-stalks separate readily from the stem.

Another course which will thro plants into bad health is allowing them to become very dry when pots are full of roots. If temporal should occur, the best course to rectify it is to plunge the plants in lukewarm water in order to the soil and roots completely. Well-established and growing a cool treatment is the best, but after potting, or when propagating heat moisture are essential for encouraging new growth.

TO PREVENT COLDS.

An excellent preventive against colds is an all-over sponge bath, in that has stood in the bowl over on rising in the morning. The heroic treatment on a cold day, I persevered in, where one is no delicate, the result is beneficial.

Rub the body well with the and a coarse towel. This will se blood to circulating, opens the of the skin and keeps it in a healthy condition, and tones the entire tem.

Buy a bag of sea salt, pour a of boiling water over a cupful add a tablespoonful of ammonia one of camphor. Put the mixture in a quart bottle and keep on stand. Add one or two tablefuls of this to the water for the ing bath, and it will be found an excellent tonic and cleanser.

KITCHEN HELPS.

An ironing-board about half the particularly in width, of that ordinarily used in the laundry is indispensable in a house where there are child frocks to be ironed. Tiny irons sleeve-boards are also useful, especially where the wash includes waists, infants' and nurse-maids' etc.

The newest glass lemon squeezer a perforated gutter, through which juice runs, minus seeds.

A double and a triple saucepan which two or three vegetables simmer at one cooking, may be had 35 cents.

A sink strainer which will save sink pipes, costs 15 cents.

A very desirable dish drainer a quarter; and a pie crimper and a pie which cuts off ragged edge ornaments the rim of dough, you get for five cents.

Fruit breads are recommended diet specialists as a wholesome substitute cake for the children's table. An important fact that children like it is not omitted. Date-bread is a fine and easily made. A cup

SAD SIDE OF WAR.

Women and Children Left Behind to Look After Themselves.

Every week by the thousands troops are leaving England for the seat of war in South Africa. They go forth amid the cheers and acclams of the throngs that accompany them to the dock side. But among these throngs are many heavy hearted women and children who are not uplifted by the general enthusiasm, for what of the girls that the soldiers leave behind them? What of the wives and children who are left, for they must part to look after themselves as best they may?

The burden falls most heavily on those women and children whose husbands and fathers are "off the strength," as the soldier's term is. By this term is meant the natural outcome of such marriages as are not officially recognized by the regimental authorities. Matrimony as an institution for the rank and file of the army is not enthusiastically encouraged by the British military powers that be. The number of officially recognized unions among privates is severely limited to four per cent. The wives and children, therefore, of only four per cent of the English private soldiers are officially recognized, and only for such as are "on the strength" is any provision made when the blast of war imperiously summons the husband and father to the field. Certain arrangements are then made to relieve the families duly borne in the "married establishment" while the bread winners are necessarily absent.

Thus the women and children are either kept in barracks or given a lodgings allowance until their husbands and fathers return. In addition to this a "separation allowance" is granted by the government, and a compulsory deduction is made from their husbands' pay.

But as at the most the wife and mother can draw only a few pence per day, her lot, never a luxurious one, is particularly hard during the husband and father's active service. The wife, however, who is not "on the strength" has a still harder row to hoe. For her no provision is made either in time of war or peace. In time of peace such families as are not on "the strength" have to get along as best they may during home service. The husband employs his leisure in doing tailoring or cobbling or such work, while the wife earns a little by washing and mending for her help-meet's comrades-in-arms. Thus, in one way or another, the contracting parties in such improvident marriages contrive to at least keep their heads above water.

But when the main support of such a family is suddenly summoned to join the "far flung battle line" it means a breaking up which is terrible in its sequences for this wife and children left behind. Consequently, amid all the pomp and circumstance of war there is much weeping and wailing in echoless, as weird a place as ever one found himself in, is the royal sepulchre at Windsor.

But all that is being changed now. The shelves for the reception of the dead are being re-arranged by Her Majesty's order. In fact, the coffins are being shifted now. The stone tables upon which the dead have lain ever since their entombment are being lifted to the sides and a beautiful marble altar is being erected at the east side of the vault.

The cumbrous iron plates which have hither sealed the entrance are to be taken away and an arched doorway

DUKE AS A SURGEON

Remarkable Philanthropic and Scientific Work of Bavaria's Charles Theodore.

The sixtieth anniversary of a very notable man was recently celebrated in Germany. It is that of Duke Charles Theodore of Bavaria, who has acquired high distinction by his work as a philanthropist and by his skill as a surgeon. For many years he has been treating persons afflicted with diseases of the eyes, and he has up to date performed operations on three thousand persons suffering from cataracts. The removal of cataracts is indeed the work to which he now devotes almost his entire time.

At first he declined to accept any fees from patients. Physicians throughout the country, however, seeing that he had practically a monopoly as regards the removal of cataracts, addressed a petition to him some time ago in which they requested him to charge the customary fee, on the ground that otherwise he would be doing an unintentional injustice to other physicians, and the Duke at once promised to comply with their request.

He planned, therefore, to charge his wealthy patients a good round sum and to spend the money, when it reached him, in establishing three hospitals, where the poor afflicted with eye diseases could be treated, one in Munich, another in Meran and a third in Tegernsee. As the money, however, did not come in as quickly as he expected, he began to build the hospitals at his own expense, and the cost of their maintenance to-day comes almost wholly out of his own pocket. This amounts to about $20,000 a year. Of his many wealthy patients few pay him for his services, and they know well that he will never press for payment.

A BUSY PAYMENT.

Such ingratitude would deter many men from continuing in their philanthropic work, but the Duke is not laboring in order to earn gratitude or money. As a matter of fact, he and his family in order to maintain the hospitals have been obliged to reduce their living expenses almost to a minimum. Like most Germans the Duke loves a good horse, but to-day almost all the stalls in his stable are empty. His wife, who was the Princess De Braganza, and his children have also given up many luxuries in order to be able to continue the good work.

About thirty patients visit the Duke daily, and from hardly one of them does he receive a fee. If he is very busy his daughters, Elizabeth and Mary, receive the patients as they arrive and give them any immediate relief that may be necessary. That they are competent to do so will be clear from the fact that they have both studied medicine and have given great attention to their father's work.

The Tegernsee hospital occupies an entire wing of the castle in which the Duke and his family reside. Poor patients on their arrival receive at once a hearty meal and a bath. Then the young ladies examine them and report to their father in regard to the condition of each.

If there is imperative necessity the operation is performed without delay, but otherwise not for several days, or until the patient has regained strength by a comfortable rest at the hospital. During these days of rest the patients receive the best possible food and care, so that, as has been well said, the Duke does not only keep a free hospital but also a free restaurant and a free home.

HINTS FOR THE FARMER.

DOSING HORSES.

Under the above caption a writer gives some excellent advice. He says: Among the most pernicious ideas which possess the minds of many farmers is the notion that almost any one can "doctor horse;" that some kind of medicine must be given to every one upon the least symptom of disease, and when he is well and thrifty some drugs must be given; now and then to keep him well. The reader will not have to strain his thinker very badly to recall some one who believed that good feed, exercise and comfortable quarters are not nearly so essential to health and thrif as a few doses of condition powders given occasionally. That foul water and no salt is all right, if he has a little sulphur and copperas once in a while.

One of the most unaccountable traits in the make-up of many men is the propensity to drug animals, and to be deluded by the boastful pretensions of ignorant vendors of nostrums warranted to cure all ills, restore shattered constitutions and be a perfect substitute for good, wholesome food and proper, humane treatment. In the light of these closing years of the Nineteenth Century every one should know that medicine is always an evil, a great evil, though it may be necessary to obviate a greater evil. No one will deny that medicine in the hands of one competent to make a correct diagnosis and skillfully administer the same is a powerful agent for relieving nearly all the ills to which the horse is subject. The point I am trying to make is that medicine, not skillfully handled, is highly injurious, even dangerous, and, with the exception of a few simple remedies, should be given only by a skilled veterinarian. Even the simpler remedies should be handled with caution.

We have all seen mild cases of colic, scours, costiveness, etc., relieved by some intelligent farmer who made no pretension to veterinary skill; but mind, the animal was really sick and in need of help, and was treated by one whose intelligence and experience enabled him to determine beyond a doubt what the trouble was, who knew about as well as any one what would give relief.

Almost reprehensible folly is that of experimenting with drugs on the horse every time he shows some trifling ailment. The man who would undertake to treat a member of his family who is sick by trying this or that drug would be set down as an idiot by every intelligent person in the community. Yet this is not a very uncommon practice in dealing with the sick horse. If the animal dies under this treatment, as it does sometimes, the owner consoles himself with the reflection that he tried everything he could hear of and did his best to save it. If, by some happy circumstances, the horse overcomes both the disease and the bungling treatment, the owner puts himself on the back as a natural "horse doctor" and wouldn't give 10 cents to boot between himself and the most skilled veterinary surgeon.

ICE HOUSE FOR DAIRY.

We have seen some very suitable home dairies which were built as a basement, the upper floor being used for supply room, etc., while all the milk was handled below. In this way the dairyman economized on ice and in the winter found his building to keep warmer. Where the ice-house and dairy are built in combination, the ice-house should be on the north side of the dairy and the cold room can be built in one corner of the ice-house. Where this is done, the cold supply part of which can be used to extend for forming plants of a busy habit. This is chiefly a her of taste, and adapted in cases where numbers of plants are grown. Loam, leaf soil, sand and charcoal with the addition of a little peat, an excellent compost. Plants that have been growing freely the last months may now require a shift that they will be established in winter and the pots filled with soil. Pot firmly, making the fresh soil as substantial as the ball of the pots ought to be clean and drained.

Water in sufficient quantity is right through the ball of roots, wait until more is needed. Just potting one good watering will do for some time, but when the are becoming well occupied with water is needed oftener. A fair, but not a sunny position, suits the rubber plant best, and if the window is hot, shade should be provided during the hottest portion of the day. Sour soil caused by errors in watering is the chief of the lower leaves turning yellow before they ought to. It is natural for the lower leaves to fall, but they do the leaf-stalk separately from the stem.

Other course which will throw the plant into bad health is allowing it to become very dry when the are full of roots. If temporarily should occur, the best course to take is to plunge the plant into warm water in order to moisten soil and roots completely. When established and growing freely treatment is the best, but after re-planting, or when propagating heat and care are essential for encouraging growth.

TO PREVENT COLDS.

Excellent preventive against colds is an all-over sponge bath, in water is stood in the bowl over night, sing in the morning. This is treatment on a cold day, but if carried in, where one is not too well, the result is beneficial. The body well with the hand coarse towel. This will set the circulation, opens the pores skin and keeps it in a healthy condition, and tones the entire system.

A bag of sea salt, pour a quartling water over a cup full and a tablespoonful of ammonia and camphor. Put the mixture in a bottle and keep on your wash.

Add one or two tablespoonsful this to the water for the morning, and it will be found an excellent tonic and cleanser.

KITCHEN HELPS.

A ironing-board about half the size of that ordinarily in the laundry is indispensable where there are children's clothes to be ironed. Tiny irons and boards are also useful, especially the wash includes shirt, infants' and nurse-maids' caps,

FRUIT BREADS.

Breads are recommended by dieticians as a wholesome substitute for the children's table. The fact that children like them omitted. Date-bread is a favorite and easily made. A cupful of left behind. Consequently, amid all the pomp and circumstance of war there is much weeping and wailing in echoless, as weird a place as ever one found himself in, is the royal sepulchre at Windsor.

But all that is being changed now. The shelves for the reception of the dead are being rearranged by Her Majesty's order. In fact, the coffins are being shifted now. The stone tables upon which the dead have lain ever since their entombment are being lifted to the sides and a beautiful marble altar is being erected at the east side of the vault.

The cumbersome iron plates which have hitherto sealed the entrance are to be taken away, and an arched doorway, with handsome gates, is to be erected in their place, making access much easier, while it will be just as safe from intruders as before. Electric wires are being run through the whole sepulchre, so that when the visitor descends, some time in the near future, he will suddenly find the place flooded with bright light. From a vault of depressing gloom the royal mausoleum is being transformed into a place of beauty.

THE BOER ARTILLERY.

HIGHER OFFICERS ARE DEFICIENT IN TECHNICAL KNOWLEDGE.

In all the military forecasts of the probabilities of the war it was from the very first estimated that encounters between the British and Transvaal artillery could end only in one way. The Royal artillery force is perhaps the one branch of the British army which has been kept at the highest pitch of efficiency since the mutiny. Guns, horses, equipment and professional training are admitted to place the corps on a level with the best of the Continental armies, except in the matter of numbers, and the mobility of the field batteries has been in recent years amply tested in Indian campaigns and in the manoeuvres at Aldershot and on Salisbury Plain.

The Transvaal artillery force is divided in the regular way into horse, field and garrison artillery and possesses a good and efficient telegraph staff. The men have been well drilled, and the shooting has been good and accurate. The weak point, however, is in the higher officers, who are utterly deficient in technical knowledge. The Free State, indeed, wisely intrusted its command to Major Albrecht, an able German artilleryman but the Transvaal has retained its chief command within the limits of the principal Boer families. The whole Transvaal corps is nominally under the command of Colonel Trichaardt, who as a subordinate officer was much ridiculed for coming up too late at Dornkop in the Jameson raid. Lieutenant Colonel Erasmus, the next in command, has no scientific training, and in the Mapoch war lost his gun to a small number of Kaffirs. Major Wolmarans and other officers, however, have studied in Holland, and as the standard of the Dutch artillery is high may have acquired some knowledge of handling their guns effectively. Up to a recent date there were no foreign officers in the artillery owing to the Boer jealousy and suspicion of the foreigners.

EVENING SHOES.

The most fashionable evening shoes are of satin the exact shade of the dress. Black satin embroidered in various colors so that they will go with any dress are more useful, and quite proper, according to the latest London advice.

DUBIOUS GENEROSITY,

If there is imperative necessity the operation is performed without delay, but otherwise not for several days, or until the patient has regained strength by a comfortable rest at the hospital. During these days of rest the patients receive the best possible food and care, so that, as has been well said, the Duke does not only keep a free hospital but also a free restaurant and a free home.

THE PRICE OF STYLE.

HOW BRITISH SOCIETY PAYS $3,500,000 A YEAR TO THE GOVERNMENT.

People who want to keep up a single establishment in England have to pay for permission to do so. The executive authorities see to that.

Last year society paid into the national exchequer by way of taxation and as the price of style or "establishment" "licenses" no less a sum than £40,863.

Think first of all, what it costs to keep "James" in all his dignity. The exchequer values him at 15s. a year. Two hundred and five thousand five hundred and thirty-six licenses for male servants were issued last year and brought in a revenue of £153,999.

There are other ranks for carriages than the cab rank. There is a 2-guinea rank a 1-guinea rank, and the democratic 15s. rank. Between these three ranks are the greatest conceivable differences. If your carriage has four or more wheels and is fitted to be drawn by two or more horses, or even mules, then you must pay £2 2s. a year for it.

But if your carriage has four or more wheels and is only drawn by one horse or mule, you can have the thing for 1 guinea a year. And if perchance you cannot live up to the four-wheeled style, but are content with a carriage or cart, if less than four wheels, then you can get off with a yearly payment of 15s. That is the cheapest style the government can tolerate. Hackney carriages come under this head and pay the 15s.

Of course the 15s. carriages are greatest in number. Last year 316,485 of them paid 15s apiece, in addition to 125,971 hackney carriages. People who ride in one-horse four-wheeled carriages come next in number with 76,202 carriages. The lucky people who ride in carriages with four wheels or more and drawn by two or more horses number 49,307.

Altogether those who ride in carriages and carts pay £510,890 a year for the privilege of riding on wheels instead of walking. But the hackney carriage and the two wheeled cart pay three-fifths of that amount.

What is a carriage without armorial bearings? Absolutely styleless. But if you wish armorial bearings painted on your carriage you must pay £12 2s for permission, as well as something to the painter for his skill.

If you wish to use armorial bearings in any other way—say on your newspaper—then a guinea a year will suffice. More people use bearings in this way than on carriages. Last year £31,909 was received for permission to put armorial bearings on carriages and £43,438 to use them in other ways.

In this way is made up the £740,363, which is paid each year for permission to live in style. But it is only when that is paid that the real expense begins.

ICE HOUSE FOR DAIRY.

We have seen some very suitable home dairies which were built as a basement, the upper floor being used for supply room, etc., while all the milk was handled below. In this way the dairyman economized on ice and in the winter found his building to keep warmer. Where the ice-house and dairy are built in combination, the ice-house should be on the north side of the dairy and the cold room can be built in one corner of the ice-house. Where this is done, the cold supply should not be expected from the ice-house, but from blocks of ice placed in the upper part of the cold room as you would treat a common refrigerator. The cold room should be built with the law that cold air drops and warm air rises in view; also that it requires the melting of ice to produce cold. A pattern may be taken from any good refrigerator providing the ice is placed in the upper part of the box and by forming cold will give a current of air circulating in the box. As to the size of the ice-house, a room 12x12 and 15 ft. high would supply enough ice. It should be built with a dead air space in the walls and roof. The ventilation should be through the roof, so as to prevent any warm air accumulating over the ice. As to the cost of such buildings it would be hard to make an estimate. We should say all the way from $300 to 1000 or even more could be well expended on such an outfit. This would be a matter which the owner would have to settle for himself. But in the handing of milk a few of the above suggestions would be considered essential, and no building should be built for such a purpose which cannot be kept clean and answer the few requirements essential in good butter making.

CARE AND FEED FOR HORSES.

The stomach of horses should not be overloaded. They should not be fed immediately before starting on a long journey, and moldy corn should always be avoided. Feed three times a day each from a separate manger. The amount needed by each animal can only be determined by observation. Corn and oats mixed with plenty of good hay and fodder with an occasional bran mash will keep the animal in good condition.

TRADING IN THE TRANSVAAL.

THE EASY-GOING WAY IN WHICH IT IS DONE IN THAT COUNTRY.

Ordinarily the Transvaal trading store is of galvanized iron, upon which the sun beats down with all its intensity, making the air within almost unbearable. But the trader does not mind this. Dressed in a pair of trousers, a light pair of shoes, and a flannel shirt, he reclines on a convenient part of the counter, and with the aid of his pipe passes the time until a customer arrives.

Should the customer be a white man the storekeeper and he will as a rule retire into the little side room for a few minutes, and a bottle and a couple of glasses will be produced. Should he, on the other hand, be a negro, the trader will glance at him casually, and, without moving, will ask him what he wants. He does this because Kaffirs often want something which they know the storekeeper has not got. The shelves in the back of the shop are piled up with gaudy blankets, clothing of all descriptions, tinned goods, clock and vases, cheap "jewelry," and various other commodities. Below these shelves are the bins where the sugar, flour, meal and coffee are kept. On one side are small shelves where patent medicines stand.

Outside the store, on the stoop, are the agricultural implements, ploughs, harrows, new inventions of all sizes and descriptions that are too big or too heavy to be easily carried away.

A MEDITERRANEAN STORM.

Rev Dr. Talmage Draws Some Lessons From It.

Jonah Punished for Disobedience—Caught in a Storm and Wrecked—Some People Have Friends Who Are Not Christians—What Are They Doing to Bring Them to Christ—The Dr. Preaches a Powerful Sermon.

A despatch from Washington says:—Rev. Dr. Talmage preached from the following text: "The men rowed hard to bring it to land, but they could not, wherefore they cried unto the Lord."—Jonah i. 13, 14.

Navigation in the Mediterranean Sea always was perilous, especially so in early times. Vessels were propelled partly by sail and partly by oar. When, by reason of great stress of weather, it was necessary to reef the canvas or haul it in, then the vessel was entirely dependent upon the oars, sometimes twenty or thirty of them on either side of the vessel. You would not venture outside Sandy Hook with such a craft as my text finds Jonah sailing in; but he had not much choice of vessels. He was running away from the Lord; and when a man is running away from the Lord, he has to run very fast.

God had told Jonah to go to Nineveh to preach about the destruction of that city, Jonah disobeyed. That always makes rough water, whether in the Mediterranean, or the Atlantic, or the Pacific, or the Caspian Sea. It is a very hard thing to scare sailors. I have seen them when the prow of the vessel was almost under water, and they were walking the deck knee deep in the surf, and the small boats by the side of the vessel have been crushed as small as kindling wood, whistling as though nothing had happened; but the Bible says that these mariners of whom I speak were frightened. That which sailors call "a lump of sea" had become a blinding, deafening swamping fury. How mad the wind can get at the water, and the water can get at the wind, you do not know unless you have been spectators. I have in my house a piece of a sail of a ship, no larger than the palm of my hand; that piece of canvas was all that was left of the largest sail of the ship Greece, that went into the storm five hundred miles off Newfoundland. Oh! what a night that was. I suppose that it was in some such storm as this that Johah was caught.

He knew that the tempest was on his account, and he asked the sailors to throw him overboard. Sailors are a generous-hearted race, and they resolved to make their escape, if possible, without resorting to such extreme measures. The sails are of no use, and so they lay hold on their oars. I see the long ranks of shining blades on either side the vessel. Oa! how they did pull, the bronzed seamen, as they laid back into the oars. But rowing on the sea is very different from rowing upon a river, and as the vessel hoists, the oars skip the wave, and miss the stroke, and the tempest laughs to scorn the flying paddles. It is of no use, no use. There comes a wave that crashes the last mast, and sweeps the oarsmen from their places, lies are brought to Christ. Ah! it is an awful thing to have half a household on one side the line and the other part of the household on the other side the line. Oh, the possibility of an eternal separation! One would think that such a thought would hover over the pillow, and hover over the arm-chair, and hover over the table, and that each clatter at the door would cause a shudder as though the last messenger had come. To live together in this world five years, or ten years, or fifty years, and then afterwards to live away from each other millions, millions, millions of years, and to know and feel that between us and eternal separation there is only one heart beat! When our Christian friends go out of this life into glory, we are comforted. We rest we shall meet them again in the good land. But to have two vessels part on the ocean of eternity, one going to the right and the other to the left, farther apart, and farther apart, and the signals cease to be recognized, and there are only two specks on the horizon, and then they are lost to sight for ever!

I have to tell you that the unavailing efforts of these Mediterranean oarsmen has a counterpart on the efforts some of us are making to bring our children to

THE SHORE OF SAFETY.

There never were so many temptations for young people as there are now. The literary and the social influences seem to be against their spiritual interests. Christ seems to be driven almost entirely from the school and the pleasurable concourse, yet God knows how anxious we are for our children. We cannot think of going to heaven without them. We do not want to leave this life while they are tossing on the waves of temptation and away from God. From which of them could we consent to be eternally separated? Would it be the son? Would it be the daughter? Would it be the eldest? Would it be the youngest? Would it be he one that is well and stout, or the one that is sick? Oh, I hear some parent saying to-night: "I have tried my best to bring my children to Christ. I have laid hold of the oars until they bent in my grasp, and I have braced myself against the ribs of the boat, and I have pulled for their eternal rescue, but I can't get them to Christ." Then, I ask you to imitate the men of the text and cry mightily unto God. We want more importunate praying for children, such as the father indulged in when he had tried to bring his six sons to Christ, and they had wandered off into dissipation. Then he got down in his prayers and said: "Oh, God, take away my life, if through that means my sons may repent and be brought to Christ;" and the Lord startlingly answered the prayer, and in a few weeks the father was taken away, and through the solemnity the six sons fled unto God. Oh, that father could afford to die for the eternal welfare of his children. He rowed hard to bring them to the land, but could not, and then he cried unto the Lord. There are parents here who are almost discouraged about their children. Where is your son to-night? He has wandered off, perhaps, to the ends of the earth. It seems as if he cannot get far enough away from your Christian counsel. What does he care about the furrows that come to your brow; about the quick whitening of right hand, give me a stout oar for my left hand, and I will pull myself into safety." No. A wave of sin comes and dashes you one way, and a wave of temptation comes and dashes you in another way, and there are plenty of rocks on which to founder, but seemingly no harbour into which to sail. Sin must be thrown overboard or we must perish. There are men in this house, in all these galleries, who have tried for ten years to become Christians. They believe all I say in regard to a future world. They believe that religion is the first, the last, the infinite necessity. With it, heaven! Without it, hell! They do everything but trust in Christ. They make sixty strokes in a minute. They bend forward with all earnestness, and they lay back until the muscles are distended, and yet they have not made one inch in ten years toward heaven. What is the reason? That is not the way to go to work. You might as well take a frail skiff, and put it down at the foot of Niagara, and then head it up toward the churning thunderbolt of waters, and expect to work your way up through the lightning of the foam into calm Lake Erie, as for you to try to pull yourself through the surf of your sin into the peace, and pardon, and placidity of the Gospel. You cannot do it in that way.

SIN IS A ROUGH SEA;
and long-boat, yawl, pinnace, and gondola go down unless the Lord deliver; but if you will cry to Christ and lay hold of Divine mercy, you are as safe from eternal condemnation as though you had been twenty years in Heaven.

I wish I could put before this audience, unpardoned, their own helplessness. You will be lost as sure as you sit there if you depend upon your own power. You cannot do it. No human arm was ever strong enough to unlock the door of heaven. No foot was ever mighty enough to break the shackle of sin. No oarsman swarthy enough to row himself into God's harbour. Wind is against you. Tide is against you. The law is against you. Ten thousand corrupting influences are against you. Helpless and undone. Not so helpless a sailor on a plank mid-Atlantic. Not so helpless a traveler girded by twenty miles of prairie on fire. Prove it you say. I will prove it. John v. 44 "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him."

But while I have shown your helplessness, I want to put by the side of it the power and willingness of Christ to save you. I think it was in 1686 a vessel was bound for Portugal, but it was driven to pieces on an unfriendly coast. The captain had his son with him, and with the crew they wandered up the beach and started on the long journey to find relief. After a while the son fainted by reason of hunger and the length of the way. The captain said to the crew: "Carry my boy for me on your shoulders." They carried him on; but the journey was so long, that after awhile the crew fainted from hunger and from weariness, and could carry him no longer. Then the father rallied his almost wasted energy, and took up his own boy, and put him on his shoulder, and carried him on mile after mile, mile after mile, until overcome himself by hunger and weariness, he, too, fainted by the way. The boy laid down and died, and the father, just at the time rescue came, also perished, living only long enough to tell the story—sad story, indeed. But glory be to God that Jesus Christ is able to take us up out of our shipwrecked and dying condition, and put us on the shoulder of His strength, and by the omnipotence of His gospel, bear us on through all the journey of this life, and, at last, through the opening gates of heaven!

HE IS MIGHTY TO SAVE.

or, as my text has it: "The men rowed hard to bring it to land, but they could not; wherefore they cried unto the Lord."

This scene is very suggestive to me, and I pray God I may have grace and strength enough to represent it before this dying yet immortal auditory. I preached you a sermon on another phase of this very subject, and I got a letter from Houston, Texas, the writer saying that the reading of that sermon in London had led him to God. And I received another letter from South Australia, saying that the reading of that sermon in Australia had brought several souls to Christ. And then, I thought, why not now take another phase of the same subject, for, perhaps, that God who can raise in power that which is sown in weakness, may this night, through another phase of the same subject, bring salvation to the people who shall hear, and salvation to the people who shall read. Men and women, who know how to pray, lay hold of the Lord God Almighty to-night, and wrestle for the blessing. Bishop Latimer would stop sometimes in his sermon, in the midst of his argument, and say: "Now, I will tell you a fable;" and to-night I would like to bring the scene of my text as an illustration of a most important religious truth. As those Mediterranean oarsmen trying to bring Jonah ashore were discomfited, I have to tell you that they were not the only men who have broken down on their paddles, and have been obliged to call on the Lord for help. I want to say that the unavailing efforts of those Mediterranean oarsmen has a counterpart in the efforts we are making to bring souls to the shore of safety, and set their feet on the Rock of Ages. You have a father, or mother, or husband, or wife, or child, or near friend, who is not a Christian. There have been times when you have been in agony about their salvation. A minister of Christ, whose wife was dying without any hope in Jesus, walked the floor, wrung his hands, cried bitterly, and said: "I believe I shall go insane, for I know she is not prepared to meet God." And there may have been days of sickness in your household, when you feared it would be

and how closely you examined the face of the doctor as he came in and scrutinized the patient and felt the pulse, and you followed him into the next room, and said: "There isn't any danger, is there, doctor?" And the hesitation and the uncertainty of the reply made two eternities flash before your vision. And then you went and you talked to the sick one about the great future. Oh, there are those here who have tried to bring their friends to God. They have been unable to bring them to the shore of safety. They are no nearer that point than they were twenty years ago. You think you have got them almost to the shore when you are swept back again. What shall you do? put down the oar? Oh, no, I do not advise that; but I do advise you to appeal to that God to whom the Mediterranean oarsmen appealed—the God who could silence the tempest and bring the ship in safety to the port. I tell you, my friends, that there has got to be a good deal of praying before our fam-

God, take away my life, if that means my sons may repent and be brought to Christ;" and the Lord startlingly answered the prayer, and in a few weeks the father was taken away, and through the solemnity the six sons fled unto God. Oh, that father could afford to die for the eternal welfare of his children. He rowed hard to bring them to the land, but could not, and then he cried unto the Lord. There are parents here who are almost discouraged about their children. Where is your son to-night? He has wandered off, perhaps, to the ends of the earth. It seems as if he cannot get far enough away from your Christian counsel. What does he care about the furrows that come to your brow; about the quick whitening of the hair; about the fact that your back begins to stoop with the burdens? Why, he would not care much if he heard you were dead.

THE BLACK-EDGED LETTER
that brought the tidings, he would put in the same package with other letters telling the story of his shame. What are you going to do? Both paddles broken at the middle of the blade, how can you pull him ashore? I throw one oar to-night with which I believe you can bring him into harbor. It is a glorious promise: "I will be a God to thee, and to thy seed after thee." Oh! broken-hearted father and mother! You have tried everything else, now make an appeal for the help and omnipotence of the covenant-keeping God, and perhaps at your next family gathering, perhaps on thanksgiving-day, perhaps next Christmas-day, the prodigal may be home; and if you crowd on his plate more luxuries than on any other plate at the table, I am sure the brothers will not be jealous, but they will wake up all the music in the house "because the dead is alive again and because the lost is found." Perhaps your prayers have been answered already. The vessel may be coming homeward, and by the light of this night's stars the absent son may be pacing the deck of the ship, anxious for the time to come when he can throw his arms around your neck, and ask for forgiveness for that he has been wringing from your old heart so long. Glorious re-union, that will be too sacred for outsiders to look upon; but I would just like to look through the window when you have all got together again, and are seated at the banquet.

"Though parents may in covenant be, And have their heaven in view, They are not happy till they see, Their children happy too."

Again, I remark, that the unavailing effort of the Mediterranean oarsmen has a counterpart in the effort which we are making to bring this world back to God, His pardon, and safety. If this world could have been saved by human effort, it would have been done long ago. John Howard took hold of one oar, and Carey took hold of another oar, and Adoniram Judson took hold of another oar, and Luther took hold of another oar, and John Knox took hold of another oar, and they pulled until they fell back dead from the exhaustion. Some dropped in the ashes of martyrdom, some on the SCALPING KNIVES OF SAVAGES, and some into the plague-struck room of the lazaretto; and still the chains are not broken, and still the despots are not demolished, and still the world is unsaved. What then? Put down the oars and make no effort? I do not advise that. But I want you, Christian brethren, to understand that the Church and the school, and the college, and the missionary society are only the instrumentalities; and if this work is ever done at all, God must do it, and He will do it, in answer to our prayer. They rowed hard to bring it to the land, but they could not; wherefore they cried unto the Lord."

Again, the unavailing effort of those Mediterranean oarsmen has a counterpart in every man that is trying to row his own soul into safety. When the Eternal Spirit flashes upon us our condition, we try to save ourselves. We say: "Give me a stout oar for my tell the story—sad story, indeed. But glory be to God that Jesus Christ is able to take us up out of our shipwrecked and dying condition, and put us on the shoulder of His strength, and by the omnipotence of His gospel, bear us on through all the journey of this life, and, at last, through the opening gates of heaven!

HE IS MIGHTY TO SAVE.

Hear it, ye dying men and women. Though your sin be long, and black, and inexcusable, and outrageous, the very moment you believe I will proclaim pardon—quick, full, grand, unconditional, uncompromising, illimitable, infinite. Oh, the grace of God I am overwhelmed when I come to think of it. Give me a thousand ladders, lashed fast to each other, that I might scale the height. Let the line run out with the anchor until all the cables of earth are exhausted, that we may touch the depth. Let the archangel fly in circuit of eternal ages in trying to sweep around this theme. Oh! the grace of God! It is so high. It is so broad. It is so deep. Glory be to my God, that where man's ear gives out, God's arm begins. Why will ye carry your sins and your sorrows any longer when Christ offers to take them. Why will you wrestle down your fears when this moment you might give up and be saved. Do you not know that everything is ready?

"See Jesus stands with open arms, He calls, He bids you come;

Sin holds you back and fears alarms,

But still there yet is room."

Oh! men and women, bought by the blood of Jesus, how can I give you up? Will you turn away this plea, as you have turned away so many? Have you deliberately chosen to die? Do you want to be lost? Do you turn your back on heaven because you do not want to see Christ, nor your own loved ones whom He has taken into His bosom. Cannot some of these fathers and mothers hear the voices of their children in glory calling to-night, saying:

"Steer this way, father,

Steer straight for me;

Here safe in heaven

I am waiting for thee."

Do you not see the hands of mercy, the hands of loved ones, let down now from the skies, beckoning to the pardoning Jesus, beckoning up to heaven and to glory. Can it be that it is all in vain?

CALVARY IN VAIN?

Death-bed warnings in vain? Ministering spirits in vain? The opening gates of heaven in vain? The importing of God's eternal Spirit all in vain? be too late to pray. I hear the breaking of the closing door of God's mercy. To some of you the last chance has come. The tongue in the great bell begins to swing for the death knell of thy soul immortal! And in an hour, in which ye think not, you disembodied spirit may go shrieking out towards the throne of an offended God, and what then? Has not God been calling to you, my dear brother, during the week? In the uncertainty of this world's treasures? Do you not feel to-night as if you would like to have God and Jesus, and all the precious promises of His Gospel? I remember that after the great crisis of 1857, when the whole land was rocked with commercial sorrow, the spirit of God descended, and there were two hundred and seventy thousand souls in one year, who found the peace of Christ. Oh, I would that the rocking in Washington City to-day—the commercial rocking—might rouse up men to the consideration of the interests of their immortal souls.

As I asked you this morning, I ask you now: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul?" Come back, oh wanderer. I do not ask where you came from to-night. Though you may have come from places of sin, I shall not be partial in my offer of salvation. I offer it to every one who sits before me. "Whosoever will, let him come," and let him come now.

Plenty of room at the feast. Jesus has the ring of His love all ready to put upon your hand. Come, now, and sit down, ye hungry ones, at the ban-

See two hands of blood, stretch towards the dying soul, as Jesus "Come unto me, all ye who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give rest."

After years had passed, a company of cutters went out from England, after a long voyage, they reached a place where the vessel was said to be sunk. They got into a small boat and hovered over the place. EXTENSIVE WORKS MAY BE ESTABLISHED FOR REFINING NICKEL

Ontario Government Will Re-Open Negotiations With Britain Which Failed in 1891—The Terms Proposed.

The Lieutenant-Governor has signed an order-in-Council which is expected to result in the establishment in Ontario of extensive works for the production of nickel to be used in the building of war ships for the British navy. It is the intention of the Government to re-open negotiations with the Imperial authorities, under which the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty may obtain an interest in the still unpatented nickel lands of the province, and by means of their development secure an unlimited supply of nickel for the manufacture of armor plate and other materials for the protection and equipment of war vessels. A similar proposition was made by the Government of Ontario in the year 1891, but as the merits of nickel in connection with the manufacture of armor plate had not then been made apparent the Lords of the Admiralty declined the proffered privilege.

THE ORDER-IN-COUNCIL.

The Order-in-Council sets forth:—That in the interests of our relations with the Empire it is desirable at an early opportunity to renew the negotiations opened with the British Government in April, 1891, which had for their object the concessions of an interest in nickel ores of the ungranted lands of the Crown for Imperial and national uses, on such terms as may be mutually agreed upon.

That it is desirable to secure the establishment in the province of refining plants in accordance with the scheme of the charter of the Canadian Copper Company or otherwise; and, if necessary to the success of this object, to ask that effect be given to the provisions of the act for imposing export duties on nickel and cop-

"Lessons in Giving." Mal. 1. 6-11 and 3.

8-2. Golden Text. 2 Cor. 9. 7.

PRACTICAL NOTES.

Verse 6. Malachi begins his prophecy with a startling dialogue. "I have loved you," God says. The priests ask, "Wherein hast thou loved us?" The Lord answers by comparing his dealings with Esau, Jacob's brother and the father of Edom, with his dealings with Israel. Edom was doomed to permanent overthrow, but "your eyes shall see, and ye shall say, The Lord will be magnified from the border of Israel." Then come the words of our lesson. A son honoreth his father, and a servant his master. If you are my son, where is mine honor? If you are my servants, where is my fear? This appeal is to the priests, the professionally holy men, who, God says, despise my name. But they ask, Wherein have we despised thy name? A question which, if honest with themselves, they were well able to answer.

7. Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar. Bread stands generically for food. The sacrifices of the temple were of fruit and flesh meat, but included "showbread," which, however, was placed upon the table, not upon the altar. The priests were given elaborate instructions for the acceptance or rejection of sacrifices brought by the people, a portion of which was regularly to be used as food for the priests. Blind, lame, and sick animals were excluded. But these priests had accepted sacrifices which the spirit, if not also the letter of the law had excluded, and what could not be either profitably sold or eaten by themselves they had contemptuously offered to God. They had thus degraded their holy office for gain. Wherein have we polluted thee? That is, Wherein have the sacrifices been polluted? In that ye say, The table of the Lord is contemptible. Not that the priests used these words, but that their actions spoke louder than any words.

8. Is it not evil? Whatever may be true of relations between human beings, it is manifestly wrong to give to the Lord's cause on earth, whether represented by ancient temple or modern church, contributions that are of no service to ourselves. "Cheap religion, costing little," is rejected by contrite heart. My name shall be great among the heathen. The gradual fulfillment of this prophecy has proceeded far enough to greatly strengthen our faith in its complete fulfillment.

The charge made in the first division of the lesson, which we have already studied, was irreverence and negligence in sacrifices. Now, after a lengthy parenthesis, the prophet speaks of how God is dishonored by tithes.

8. Will a man rob God? Could one dare to plan such robbery? Yes. Nebuchadnezzar had done so when, destroying the temple, he took to his own city its consecrated treasures. But surely priests would never think for a moment of such a crime, and we can hear their indignant voices asking, Wherein have we robbed thee? The answer is, In tithes and offerings. The "tithe" was an assessment of one tenth of all increase of property. Whatever source of wealth a man had in flocks, in vineyards, or herds, in merchandise or manufactory, two tenths of its profits were officially collected, one tenth being spent for the expenses of government and the support of the poor, the other going directly to the maintenance of religious worship and the support of the Levites and priests. The "offerings" were the sacrifices which the law required the people to make.

9. Ye are cursed with a curse. In robbing God they had expected to enrich themselves, but their crime had brought poverty.

10. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse. Into the treasure chambers of the temple, which had been so empty that the public service had languished and rich men had used the chambers as dwelling-rooms. It is time now to call attention to the bearing of this on our present religious life. These treasure chambers answer to the missionary treasures and local church funds of our time. And those who today refuse to contribute toward God's cause rob God as really as did the ancient priests. Meat is inclusive of all tithes, which were paid in kind. Prove me now. Prove me now. If you were rich, you could not perhaps so well prove me; but you are poor, and all your efforts to make yourselves rich at the expense of God, have failed. Now try the other way. Herewith. By bringing all the tithes. Windows of heaven. A poetical term for the sources of rain, the coming of which would renew fertility and national wealth. There are spiritual windows of heaven which we can open by fidelity in God's service, and so bring down showers of grace. There shall not be room enough to receive it. Rather, not room enough to store it. The heaven-sent treasure shall be "pressed down, shaken together, and running over."

11. I will rebuke. I will hold in check. The devourer. The locust, which was already devastating their farm lands. The fruit of your ground. All manner of vegetable growth. Neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time. Vegetable disease had caused the grapes to rot on the vines or to fall without ripening.

12. All nations shall call you blessed. Surrounding people shall hear that you are under the special care of the Lord. These promises are typical of God's dealings with individuals as well as with nations. A delightsome land, Pure souls always dwell in a land of joy, peace, and pleasure. The sinner cannot help envying the saint whom he pretends to despise.

tions with the Empire it is desirable at an early opportunity to renew the negotiations opened with the British Government in April, 1891, which had for their object the concessions of an interest in nickel ores of the ungranted lands of the Crown for Imperial and national uses, on such terms as may be mutually agreed upon.

That it is desirable to secure the establishment in the province of refining plants in accordance with the scheme of the charter of the Canadian Copper Company or otherwise; and, if necessary to the success of this object, to ask that effect be given to the provisions of the act for imposing export duties on nickel and copper, subject to such modifications in favour of the United Kingdom and the other colonies of the British Empire as may appear to be in the common interest.

MUST PRODUCE FINE NICKEL

That in ungranted lands of the Crown it is advisable that all grants of mining lands hereafter issued shall provide in the patent or lease that the copper and nickel ores upon or in such lands shall be treated and refined in the province so as to produce fine nickel and copper of marketable quality, and that for any violation or evasion of this proviso by the grantee, his heirs or assigns, such lands shall revert to and be vested in her Majesty, her successors and assigns for the public uses of the province, freed and discharged of any interest or claim of any other person or persons whatsoever, as if they had never been granted.

BRITAIN DID NOT ACCEPT.

A memorandum accompanying the Order-in-Council explains that in 1891 it was proposed in view of the import- and national uses to which nickel was being then applied by foreign Governments, and of the consequent demand for mining locations in Ontario, an arrangement might be made, under which the Government of the United Kingdom should acquire a substantial or, possibly, a controlling interest in the nickel deposits of the Sudbury district. The Imperial Government was to be granted, conjointly with the province, or in such other manner as might be agreed to, control over part of all the nickel ore in the Crown lands of the district, subject to such arrangements for the establishment in Ontario of nickel-steel works or manufactures, the development of the mines, and considerations of royalty on ore, as might be mutually agreed upon and as should be approved by the Legislature.

Though Britain in 1891 declined the offer, it is believed that now, since the value of nickel armour has been fully established, the negotiations may be profitably renewed.

8. Is it not evil? Whatever may be true of relations between human beings, it is manifestly wrong to give to the Lord's cause on earth, whether represented by ancient temple or modern church, contributions that are of no service to ourselves. "Cheap religion, costing little," is rejected by God. It was a wise man who said that God never despises the widow's mite, but always despises the miser's mite. Offer it now unto thy governor. The upright, downright, straightforward man who was now governor, Nehemiah by name, was not grasping; he had repeatedly refused tributes which by all custom belonged to his office; but he was a just man, and "matter-of-fact," and he could not easily be imposed upon. He would have made short work with an inane or presumptuous petitioner. Treat God the way you treat the governor.

9. Now, I pray you, beseech God that he will be gracious unto us. All orientals, going to a governor or judge for favors, take gifts with them. But, coming to God for spiritual blessing these hypocrites bring stale bread and lame lambs and blind heifers. This hath been by your means. Read this sentence with the accent on "hath." Extraordinary as is this arraignment, it is true. Will he regard your persons? A question that has the force of the negative answer. No.

10. Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for naught? Utterly venal are ye all. But the best recent translators and commentators give us another meaning, which is well expressed by Dr. Smith: "Better that sacrifice should cease than that such offerings should be presented in such spirit. Better no worship at all than such false worship. Is there no one to close the doors of the temple altogether, so that the altar smoke not in vain?" The close of the verse gives a similar thought in strong affirmations.

11. Because. From the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles. If you are bound to be hypocritical, there are at least plenty of sincere worshipers elsewhere. You bring the sick, and the blind, and the lame for sacrifice, but outcast Gentiles will presently sacrifice their lives for my sake. The time is coming and "now is," when the people of Judah and Jerusalem will no longer be the exclusive worshipers of God, but whoever "worships him in spirit and in truth." In every place incense shall be offered unto my name. Incense is symbolic of prayer. A pure offering. The offering of humble and

A nursing sister in the military hospital at Ladysmith in the course of a letter to an ex-Lord Mayor of London says:—"The glorious battle at Elandslaagte was a mighty success, but at what cost! All night Saturday the wounded streamed in, and all day Sunday. We not only had all the beds filled, but the wounded were lying about the floor as thickly as we could put them. We could only just step between them to administer to their wants. They were wet and cold. Some had been lying for 30 hours on the wet ground. They told sad tales of suffering, but there were no complaints or murmurings. Their bravery and endurance were marvellous. There were several wounded Boers and it was really amusing to see large-hearted Tommy Atkins fraternizing with his enemy. There was one particularly touching little scene. A Gordon Highlander had his arm amputated a Boer in the next bed had his arm amputated in exactly the same place. I took charge of the latter when he was brought from the theatre. When he became conscious the two poor fellows eyed each other silently until the good-natured Tommy Atkins could stand it no longer. 'Sister,' he called, 'give him two cigarettes out of my box. Tell him I sent them. Here's a match. Light one for him.'

"I took the cigarettes and the message. The Boer turned and looked in amazement. Then he was overcome, and burst into tears, and the Highlander did the same. I am afraid I was on the point of joining them, but time would not permit.

There is nothing so bad for a cough as coughing. It tears the tender membrane of the throat and lungs, and the wounds thus made attract the germs of consumption. Stop your cough by using the family remedy that has been curing coughs and colds of every kind for over sixty years. You can't afford to be without it.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

loosens the grasp of your cough. The congestion of the throat and lungs is removed; all inflammation is subdued; and the cough drops away.

Three sizes: the one dollar size is the cheapest to keep on hand; the 50c. size for coughs you have had for some time; the 25c. size for an ordinary cold.

"For 15 years I have a very bad cough. The doctors and everybody else that I had the misfortune of consulting, recommended Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I now take a bottle and a half of it every day."

ways. I have referred to this matter more than once in the past, but it is of such tremendous importance that I venture to take space to quote from the Toronto Globe's London correspondent, who is in close touch with the British market, and has personal knowledge of the evils whereof he speaks. "It is most discouraging," he writes "to learn that the packing of apples, so far received this season from Canada is again in many cases dishonest. Two or three layers of very fine fruit are put at each end of the barrel, and the remainder is trash. As has been often enough pointed out before, every person who buys a barrel of such fruit is."

A GOOD CUSTOMER SPOILED.

It cannot be too strongly stated and should be brought home by every possible means to those interested in the Canadian produce business that the thing above all others which the Englishman never forgives is being cheated in this way by fair appearances, and the shortest and sharpest road to the ruin of Canadian trade with this country is to allow such dishonest practices to flourish unchecked. The Commissioners of the Department of Agriculture, who have been on this side from time to time would tell and doubtless have not failed to do so of many promising openings for Canadian produce which have been lost in this way. One might have thought that after the manner in which the apple business was ventilated in the Canadian Parliament and press we should have heard no more about it, and yet here it bobs up at the very beginning of the next season. It is simply disgraceful that one rascal should in this way endanger the business of perhaps a score of honest dealers, and curtail the profits of producers all over the Dominion. Though the culprits were Cabinet Ministers they should be found out and made an example of."

ANOTHER MARE'S NEST DESTROYED.

It will be remembered that intense indignation was simulated some months ago by a section of the Opposition press because of the alleged outrages which were being permitted, if not actually encouraged, by the Minister of Public Works, upon the settlers of Anticosti Island; and had any injustice been done and no heed given to complaints thereof, there would undoubtedly have been neglect at least on the part of some one whether Minister or subordinate, but far worse was alleged. The poor victims were not French and they were Methodists, so it was said; and therefore Mr. Tarte was persecuting them for this double crime,—or blunder which is worse,—their nationality and their creed. So exercised did some become in the matter that at least one annual Conference was persuaded to pass resolutions about it, while the Montreal Conference took the story so seriously that they appealed to the government to investigate. This was quickly agreed to and the government sent their own president—Rev. Dr. Griffith—to look into the matter and report.

That gentleman has returned and reports himself "thoroughly satisfied with the result of his visit." He considers that there is a

"GOOD CHANCE OF A SETTLEMENT" as a result of the negotiations now pending and he reports the settlers in a very reasonable state of mind and readily disposed to agree to any fair terms." This is the Montreal Star's report so there can be no suspicion of its being biased in favor of the Minister. Thus does another nice little

TAKE UP A COPPER COLLECTION.

To the Editor of the EXPRESS:

Plucky little Natal is in difficulties. A cyclone (of war) has passed over its land and desolated it.

It is deeply in debt, its national industrial activities are brought suddenly to a complete standstill. And its vital arteries throughout which its life might be recruited are completely closed.

In such a condition, it necessarily loses hope for the immediate future, loses nerve and heart. It has appealed to the mother country for pecuniary aid.

Now we all know that country is giving freely of its money and best life-blood for the national honour and good, and for the Empire; while at the same time she has to be on the alert and strong against unscrupulous deadly and powerful national enemies, and she shouldn't be asked to do too much at the present time, in the way of pecuniary aid to Natal.

Natal is fighting the battle of the Empire. They declared the object of the Boers was to drive the British out of South Africa, "so that the other mainly nations of Europe could divide up the other colonial countries of Britain between themselves," (which they are very eager to do.)

No one denies that it would have been a crippling blow to the Empire to lose South Africa, and a fatal termination to the new prosperity of all the colonies, Canada included. And if the Boers had been a week in the field sooner, they might not good hopes of realizing their purpose.

But little Natal stood in the breach, and held stout and strong; so, she has been, and is fighting the Empire's battle. Now this little country is in grievous and dire industrial and financial depression, it is the plain duty of all the other numerous healthy well-to-do colonies of the family to pass round the plate and take up (at least) a copper collection (either nationally or privately) and set this little colony on its feet again, and start it on its prosperous career—in short give it a new and bright Natal day.

This should be a project common to all the Colonial nations, and not confined to any one of them. It would be a strong bond of union, and would help open the eyes of all of them to their true interests, which are in the way of unity of sentiment and of true principles and mutual help.

It may be said that the Boers also need pity and assistance. But we remember that they are fabulously rich, and that they love to fight and shoot; that in fact this mode of life is traditionally normal with them.

So, let the plate go round the great world-empire for the coppers, and if

Is Pitch a Solid or a Liquid

An interesting question called for opinion from the courts in Trinidad whether pitch is a solid or a liquid stratum of pitch in that island is from four to seven feet below the surface and when dug up through the melts and oozes out. So if a man down near his neighbor's lot he would collect pitch coming from his neighbor's land. The plan was adopted by one of the witnesses a plan adopted when you want to dig neighbor's pitch. "It bulges out explained, "and you shave it off morning."

But suit was brought by one of a neighbor whose pitch had thus shaved off in adjoining land. The defense was that an underground stratum of pitch was like so much water man's property till appropriated. The court held that pitch was a mineral and that one had no more right to it from a neighbor by the process than one would have to deposit of iron or silver.—Manufacture

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, DEC. 8, 1899.

OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

Ottawa, Dec. 2:—The very substantial prospect that a large proportion of the American export grain traffic will, in the not far distant future, be permanently diverted from New York City and from Buffalo to the St. Lawrence River route with its terminal at Montreal, is arousing the most intense interest, not only in the cities likely to be most vitally interested, but at the capital of the Republic among the legislators thereof. Already the pinch is beginning to make itself felt and more than one piece of legislation will be presented at the next sitting of Congress. There is for instance a proposal to subsidize American built vessels trading upon the Upper Lakes; there is a proposal to build a ship-canal across the State of New York from Lake Ontario to the Hudson River, and so forth. Already the pinch is beginning to make itself felt and more than one piece of legislation will be presented at the next sitting of Congress. There is for instance a proposal to subsidize American built vessels trading upon the Upper Lakes; there is a proposal to build a ship-canal across the State of New York from Lake Ontario to the Hudson River, and so forth. Our rivals for the transcontinental carrying trade are becoming desperate, and there appears to be excellent ground for their nervous apprehension for already the tide is turning against them. Last year for example there were 50,000,000 bushels of wheat exported from New York, but for the first ten months of this year there has been less than 23,000,000 bushels. On the other hand the same ten months in Montreal shows a bigger business than the whole of 1898, in spite of the handicap caused by the withdrawal of so many carriers by the Imperial authorities for war transportation.

seriously that they appealed to the government to investigate. This was quickly agreed to and the government sent their own president—Rev. Dr. Griffith—to look into the matter and report.

That gentleman has returned and reports himself "thoroughly satisfied with the result of his visit." He considers that there is a

"GOOD CHANCE OF A SETTLEMENT as a result of the negotiations now pending and he reports the settlers in a very reasonable state of mind and readily disposed to agree to any fair terms." This is the Montreal Star's report so there can be no suspicion of its being biased in favor of the Minister. Thus does another nice little election fabrication come to an untimely end!

From across the seas to come good words for our much abused Minister of Public Works, the writer this time being an absolute stranger and a Conservative at that. A special London cable to the Toronto Globe on Wednesday reads as follows:—"Referring to Hon. Mr. Tarte's attitude regarding the Canadian contingent The Cardiff Daily Mail, an influential Conservative organ, has a long and earnest leading article to-day. Mr. Tarte's attitude is held to be most loyal and proper. The article concluded by strongly scoring the Opposition papers of Canada for reflections cast upon a body of colonists which Britain holds in high honor."

THE MANITOBA LOCALS.

The local campaign in Manitoba appears to be moving merrily along and from the reports which reach here must be one one of marvellous enthusiasm, especially on the Conservative side. Take for instance the Toronto Mail's report of a meeting this week in Winnipeg where we are told the reception to Mr. Hugh John Macdonald was one of the most favorable ever accorded to a public man in the Province. "For a long time the tempestuous roars of applause which broke out again and again prevented the Hon. gentleman from making himself heard at all; * * * and audience was extraordinarily enthusiastic in its demonstrations, especially to Mr. Macdonald, interrupting him time and again with cheers and the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Quite hilarious time evidently. But somehow it seems to remind one so forcibly of the lad who always whistled to keep his courage up as he went through the churchyard by night, and the darker the night the louder he whistled. As far as one can learn however the expedient is meeting with very indifferent success among friends and well-wishers of Mr. Macdonald in this part of the country and the most sanguine prophet does not venture to predict a victory, (save of the good old-fashioned "moral" variety,) and the more sober and better informed feel that they have gone to the extreme limit of safety when they give him a dozen supporters, and this is less than a third of the entire House.

THE DEVOTEES OF THE WEED.

If the extent to which the people indulge in luxuries is any test of the degree of prosperity enjoyed in the country—and it is generally considered a fairly reliable indication—Canada must be enjoying a very comfortable time just now; for she, or rather her men folk are getting away with a vast aggregation of cigars. The seductive weed would appear to have more than ordinary attractions to the men of the northern zone for the excise returns just published show that we consumed 10,000,000 colony on its feet again, and start it on its prosperous career—in short give it a new and bright Natal day.

This should be a project common to all the Colonial nations, and not confined to any one of them. It would be a strong bond of union, and would help open the eyes of all of them to their true interests, which are in the way of unity of sentiment and of true principles and mutual help.

It may be said that the Boers also need pity and assistance. But we remember that they are fabulously rich, and that they love to fight and shoot, that in fact this mode of life is traditionally normal with them.

So, let the plate go round the great world-empire for the coppers, and if there is a dime or a gold piece put in, they will not be thrown away, and Natal can again smile through its tears.

Is Baby Too Thin?

If so, there must be some trouble with its food. Well babies are plump; only the sick are thin. Are you sure the food is all right? Children can't help but grow; they must grow if their food nourishes them. Perhaps a mistake was made in the past and as a result the digestion is weakened. If that is so, don't give the baby a lot of medicine; just use your every-day common sense and help nature a little, and the way to do it is to add half a teaspoonful of to the baby's food three or four times a day. The gain will begin the very first day you give it. It seems to correct the digestion and gets the baby started right again. If the baby is nursing but does not thrive, then the mother should take the emulsion. It will have a good effect both upon the mother and child. Twenty-five years proves this fact.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
Dec. 4th, 1899.

Present, Mayor Pruyn in the chair councillors Lapum, Carson, Leonard, Aylsworth, Miller S. R., Miller F. F.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

Councillor Leonard presented report of Finance Committee which was adopted.

A special report of Finance Committee recommending that Mrs. D. W. Fraileck's assessment be reduced from $1400 to $1000, and that she be refunded $11.20; that the assessment of Mrs. S. J. Davy, on Tichbourne House, destroyed by fire, be collected for six months only, as she only received six months rent and that $22.40 be refunded her; that the mistake in the assessment of Chas. Stevens and Rathbun Co., of $100 each be rectified and that each receive a rebate of $2.80.

Dr. Cook's assessment of $40 more than last year was reduced $400.

Miss Rennie's assessment was reduced to $1,500.

Councillor Lapum presented the report of the Street Committee, showing an expenditure of $58.35 on roads and streets. Received and adopted.

The Town Property Committee asked payment of $4, on lockup and walk. Ordered paid.

The Poor and Sanitary Committee reported an expenditure of $49.95 aiding poor for nine weeks.

The Police Committee reported recommending payment of $6.20, balance of Jas. Daly's account. Adopted.

Councillor Lapum introduced a by-law for the appointment of a returning officer and deputy-returning officers for municipal elections. The blanks were filled in as follows:—

"A curious thing happened here today," said the head clerk at one of the leading hotels in New Orleans. "About a month ago a gentleman and his wife, from Milwaukee, spent a couple of days in the house, and on leaving the lady missed a valuable ring. She was positive it had been stolen by one of the servants. We set an investigation on foot and promised to forward the ring if found.

"A little later the husband wrote to inquire whether the search had been successful, and when we replied in the negative he notified us formally that he proposed to sue the hotel. He claimed we had shown great negligence in not arresting a suspected employee, and his comments were bitter in the extreme. That was two weeks ago.

"Now here is the sequel in the shape of a third letter that arrived this morning. He says that he and his wife reached home a few days ago and in unpacking the luggage found the ring in one of the trunks, and he is manly enough to add a very handsome apology for his hasty conclusions. Strange to say, that is the first time in the history of the house that any guest has frankly admitted such a blunder after taking his departure, and blunders of that kind are of almost weekly occurrence.

"It is the commonest thing in the world at all hotels for persons to go away declaring that they have been robbed by the help. We know the missing article subsequently turned up, because the subject is never referred to during later visits, but in the meanwhile a score or so of bumble, honest and hardworking people have been placed under a suspicion that is wholly unwarranted and unjust. That is a point the average traveler doesn't seem to consider. Hotel chambermaids are continually returning valuables which they find in rooms. Dishonesty among them is so rare as to be almost unknown."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Taking Something.

At a recent licensing case in Dublin a certain well known ecclesiastic was being cross examined. I am sure the genial dean of the Chapel Royal will forgive me mentioning his name, as he is an Irishman, with more than an Irishman's fund of wit.

Scene—A police court. Applicant—A bibulous innkeeper. Witness—The dean, appearing on behalf of the Church of Ireland Temperance society.

"And you, Mr. Dane of the Chapel Royal, were in that public house?" came the first question.

"I was, sir," came an unblushing answer.

"And may I ask, Mr. Dane of the Chapel Royal, did you take anything in the public house?"

"I did, sir."

Great sensation in court.

"Oh, you did, Mr. Dane, did you? And may I ask, Mr. Dane of the Chapel Roy-

MAKING A SUNSET.

Now Nature Manages Those Splendid Spectacular Exhibitions.

I asked an eminent scientist how nature manages those splendid spectacular exhibitions which are called sunsets.

"That's simple enough," he said. "When the air is moist, it absorbs the blue rays of light and lets the red rays pass. Therefore the sun is sometimes red. Then when the sun drops below the horizon we are able to see only the vertical rays, which often strike masses of vapor, which we call clouds, and are reflected.

"Rays of light are composed of waves or vibrations of different sizes, speed and intensity. The short waves are blue, the long ones are red, and the intermediate waves represent the different primary colors.

"When blue and a red wave get mixed, they form a purple wave, and other colors are made by different combinations, just as a painter mixes his paints on his pallet. As waves of light strike the clouds together they produce some rare tints, some glorious combinations, which artists have never been able to imitate, and if the banks of vapor floating on the horizon are of irregular shape they produce the fantastic effects we admire so much."

"Is the display assisted by refraction from the meteoric dust in the atmosphere?"

"Perhaps so, but usually not to any appreciable extent. There isn't enough to take into consideration. The volume of the atmosphere that surrounds the earth is equal to more than 200,000,000 cubic miles, a quantity so vast that the human mind can scarcely comprehend it, and hence, if 1,000,000 meteors were to fall at once, they would not be any more noticeable than a puff of dust.

"There have been phenomena," continued the scientist, "which have added to the beauty of sunset displays. In August, 1883, on the little island of Krakatoa, in the strait of Sunda, between Sumatra and Java, there was a terrific volcanic eruption—the greatest cataclysm that has occurred within the memory of man. Some 80,000 lives were lost. The eruption was followed by extraordinary atmospheric phenomena, visible over the greater portion of the globe.

"It was attributed to volcanic dust which was projected in stupendous quantities for miles into the air and carried around the world by the currents that are constantly moving in the upper atmosphere. It made the sunsets of that year remarkable and unprecedented for their beauty."

THE STOLEN KISS.

The hammock hung between the trees,

The maiden fair

Lay in it with her eyelids closed—

He saw her there.

With wildly beating heart he stole

Up to her side

And smote to her lips, red lips

His own he applied.

He kissed her—kissed the gentle maid,

So fair, so sweet,

And with a tumult in his breast

Beat a retreat.

At length she slowly straightened up,

With open eyes,

"He took but one," she said and sighed

A lot of sighs.

THE CROWN OF LOVE.

What does love mean and how much happiness does it bring to the average woman? To be a sweetheart, a wife, a mother—this is called the crown of womanhood; yet there are crowns which bring only misery and pain to the wearers.

any woman who suffers with condragging, wearying, life-sapping fits be happy? Does not her womanhood become a symbol of misery rather than of happiness? Daring women realized how surely fierce's wonderful "Favorite Prescription" would restore them to health and the perfection of fitness, there would be more of joy set upon brows now filled with misery.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids

GENTLEMEN—It is with very great pleasure I voluntarily bear testimony to the great benefit I have derived from the use of your Capsuloids. They have been of universal value to me in the strengthening of my throat and chest, and also in promoting the circulation of the blood. Believing as I do that the splendid preparation ought to be universally known among all sufferers of Chest Complaints and Nervous Affections I gladly recommend their use. Especially during the fall and winter months are they of excellent service as a tonic to the system.

Yours truly,

age and endurance.

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY.

Mr. Will German, of Syracuse, N. Y., has been visiting Mr. Hildebrand Valleau, High Shore, and other friends in the county.

An English company is building a large pickling and canning factory in Bloomfield. This will mean a larger acreage of vegetables and small fruits than ever in this garden county.

It is rumored about town that Mr. Geo. O. Alcorn is likely to be the Conservative candidate at the next general election, but hush! we must not be telling tells out of school.

We quote the following from a recent issue in the Richmond Hill, "Liberal." There appears to be no scarcity of school teachers in this part of the province. The trustees of Langstaff school advertised a few days ago in the Globe for a female teacher, 2nd class, at a salary of $300, and received 130 applications. The choice fell to Miss Lottie Waldron, Picton. Miss Waldron is a graduate of Hamilton Normal college and holds a 1st class professional certificate. She has many relatives in Napanee and vicinity who will doubtless be pleased to learn of her success in the recent midsummer exams. when she secured her present standing.

We are very jubilant these days!

The Picton Gazette has designed to notice our existence. We think it was Jos Billings who wrote "You can dodge an elephant but you can't dodge a fly" and our little comment regarding the presence of so many Liberals and Patrons at the recent Conservative meeting in town and the noticeable absence of Conservatives at Liberal meetings was the "fly," the Gazette could not or did not dodge. We thank the Gazette for the information concerning the broad-mindedness of the men whose cause it champions. We were under the impression however that broad-minded people seldom jump at conclusions and the Gazette certainly took a leap when it speaks of the High Shore correspondent of the NAPANEE EXPRESS. With our best bow we beg to tender the information that we do not hail from High Shore. The Gazette is a bright, newsy, up-to-date paper, and—hidden away out of sight, for we do not wear our heart on our sleeve, is, perhaps a warm feeling for its broad-minded editor.

WHAT WE INTEND DOING NOW

Experience tells us that our WINTER CLOTHING must be sold this month or else carried over, for very little is sold after New Years's. We prefer to have our CLEARING SALE RIGHT IN SEASON and will SELL OUR GOODS as low now as later on; disregarding the fact that every woolen garment we own cannot be made up again at the price it cost us, there will be no advanced rates. Bear in mind the fact that we shall endeavor to clear out the best part of our stocks of

Men's, Youth's and Boy's Ulsters, Overcoats, Heavy D. B. Suits, Mitts, Gloves and Men's Furnishings

Of every nature before January next and that you have a chance to select choice of styles and the best qualities at prices usually made at sales after the season is over.

General Meigs was the architect of the pension office in Washington and was inordinately proud of his achievement. When General Sheridan inspected the building, General Meigs accompanied him. Sheridan went thoroughly over the structure from top to bottom without passing any comment, but when the spection was completed he turned to his guide with:

"Well, Meigs, I have only one fault to find with it."

"What is that general?" asked the delighted ex-quartermaster general.

"It's fireproof," replied Sheridan.—San Francisco Argonaut.

BLOODY BATTLE FOUGHT

Methuen's Column Drives 8,000 Boers From Their Position Near Kimberley

Desperate Fighting for Ten Hours Without Food or Water--British Losses Are Very Heavy--One of the Hardest Battles in the Annals of the British Army.

Gen. Methuen reports:—"Reconnoitred at 5 a.m. on Tuesday enemy's position on River Modder, and found them strongly entrenched and concealed. No means of outflanking, river being in full flood.

Action commenced with artillery, mounted infantry, and cavalry at 5.30. Guards on right, Ninth Brigade on left.

Attacked position in widely extended formation at 6.30, and supported by the artillery, found ourselves in front of the whole Boer force, 8,000 strong, with two large guns, four Krupps, etc.

The Naval Brigade rendered great assistance from the railway.

After desperate hard fighting, which lasted ten hours, our men, without water or food, and in the burning sun, made the enemy quit his position.

General Pole-Carew was successful in getting a small party across the river, gallantly assisted by 300 sappers.

I speak in terms of high praise of the conduct of all who were engaged in one of the hardest and most trying fights in the annals of the British army. If I can mention one arm particularly, it is two batteries of artillery."

RESULT OF THE BATTLE.

As regards the actual result of the battle, the London Morning Post military critic, who, it has been generally proved, has keen foresight, says:

"It does not seem too much to presume that it was won by the British, though the despatch refrains scrupulously from referring to a victory. The enemy was forced to withdraw from his position, which may mean falling back of the advance to the interior lines, or the abandonment of the bridge head defences."

The critic assumes that there was a bridge, and that the Boers at the outset were defending the southern approaches to it.

The former is the more plausible, since General Pole-Carew was crossing with the help of sappers, which would negative the hope that the bridge was in the hands of the British. The sappers were undoubtedly pontooning.

Complaint is beginning to be heard against the employment of so many sailors for purely soldiers' work so far from the coast. The complaint is based on the ground that the navy cannot afford to lose men whom it takes so long to make and replace.

There are also loud complaints that more artillery and cavalry have not been furnished to General Methuen. It is argued that at the start of his march he did not have sufficient cavalry for pursuit and to clinch the victories gained, and that branch must now be so overworked as to be practically worn out.

The London Daily News says:—"Whatever comes, we must brace our nerves to meet it. Certainly, to-day looks as if we had before us a very stern and earnest struggle before we see our way clear to final victory."

BOERS' RETREAT FROM ENSLIN.

The London Daily Chronicle's cor-vision, under Lord Methuen, to Durban, whence it should move northward to relieve General White. For some reason, possibly the belated arrival at Cape Town of some of the troops comprising the first division, this idea was given up. Lord Methuen was put in command of the Kimberley relief expedition, and General Ciery, who was originally intended as the leader of the second division, went to Durban to direct operations designed to push Joubert's army back.

Of the original first division most of the second brigade was sent to Durban, while the first brigade, comprising the Guards, went north to the Cape Colony border to form the nucleus of Methuen's command. The only clues to the composition of the rest of his force are found in the newspaper and official despatches. Apparently the column is made up about as follows:—

INFANTRY.

First Brigade—Second and Third Grenadier Guards, First and Second Coldstream Guards, First Scots Guards.

Ninth Brigade—Second Yorkshire Light Infantry, First Northumberland Fusiliers, Second Northamptonshires, First Loyal North Lancashires, Second West Yorkshires.

ARTILLERY.

At least three batteries, including the Seventh and probably the Fourteenth.

CAVALRY.

Ninth Lancers.

NAVAL BRIGADE.

Bluejackets from Cape fleet, Royal Marine Light Infantry.

NEWS FROM MAFEKING.

Colonel Baden-Powell, under date of Mafeking, November 20, has sent the following to the War Office through General Forester-Walker at Cape Town:—

"All well here. Cronje has gone with a commando, and with about 20 wagons, to Richters, Transvaal, leaving most of the guns here with the Marico and Lichtenberg contingents, with orders to shell us into submission."

"Bombardment and sniping continue with very small results."

"The enemy's sentries drew us out Saturday by making a show of going away and leaving a big gun apparently in a state of being dismantled. Our scouts found the enemy hidden in force, so we sat tight."

"The enemy's 91-pounder became damaged, and has been replaced by another more efficient."

"I am daily pushing out our advance works, with good effect."

"The health of the garrison is good. No casualties to report."

"GOING STRONG" ON THE 24TH.

Capt. Wilson, in a message from Mafeking, under date of November 24, says:—

"We are going strong. We are still beleaguered. There is intermittent shelling."

DID SOME HUSTLING.

A despatch from Cape Town says:—"While everybody is talking about the good work of the Naval brigade now fighting with Gen. Lord Methuen, it may not be amiss to tell how they hustled to the front. During the train journey northward there was a serious collision on the Victoria road.

BOERS KILLED BY BOERS.

A despatch from London, Wednesday, says:—"The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph cabling under date of November 27 from Naauwpoort, says that a Dutchman living near the scene of the skirmish of November 23 declares that a party of Boers dressed in khaki, while approaching their own position, were fired on by their comrades, who mistook them for British soldiers. Five or six of them were killed."

RESERVES RESPOND WELL.

A despatch from London says:—"Lieut.-General Sir Charles Mansfield Clarke, it is reported, will be the commander of the 6th division."

The latest phase of the mobilization of the reserves has proved as satisfactory as have former calls. Out of 9,786 men summoned, 9,558 have rejoined the colors.

STATUS OF THE BOERS.

The action of Lord Pauncefote and other British Ambassadors in notifying the powers that a state of war had existed since October 11 between Great Britain and the South African Republics has prompted enquiries by the various London Embassies regarding the nature of the hostilities. It is officially stated that the notification has in no wise changed the British views as to the Boers' status.

The Government maintains that giving the Boers belligerent rights does not constitute an acknowledgment of their claim to independence, evidencing as proof of this contention that both foreign Governments and the Government of the United States treated the Confederates as belligerents.

HIS RETRE

News Comes From Methuen Ha

London Has Not Received Long Silence Is Caused Back From Frere--

A special despatch received in London on Friday from Frere, dated Nov. 28, says that, while attempting to build up a 500-foot bridge over the Tug river, the Boers were driven back by the British artillery and mounted fantry.

Whether the bridge referred to is the one on the Weenen-Ladysmith road, or at Colenso, is left in doubt.

GEN. METHUEN'S POSITION.

A despatch from Berlin, says:—"Deutsche Warte announces, apparently on the authority of Dr. Leyds, agent of the Transvaal, that Gen. L. Methuen is unable to cross the Modder river, and that his retreat is cut by Commandant Delarey, who is operating near Kaffir's kop."

NO NEWS IN LONDON.

A despatch from London, Saturday, says:—"There is a complete absence of recent news of the war and even a lack of the casualties sustained by the British in Tuesday's fight at Modder river has not been received. This causes considerable public impatience. It is learned that Gen. Lord Methuen has been reinforced by half a battalion of Highlanders and the Daily News says a regiment of cavalry and a battery of artillery also. The continued silence concealing his force suggests the possibility of a hostile movement in his rear."

Nothing regarding the forward movement in Natal has been received later than the date of Nov. 28, when seems, the Boers held both the railway and wagon bridges at Colenso. The British were then still at Frere. No movement of Gen. Gatacre's force has been reported.

GATACRE'S ADVANCE.

Gatacre's force may be slow in commencing operations. The country which it has to work is excessively cult and most favorable to the Boers. Mountains covered with borders, an admirable shelter for men, and river beds, offering exceptional opportunities for ambuscades, this is the nature of the ground.

It is eighteen miles from Burghalp to Stormberg, and for more than half the distance the road winds between precipitous declivities. There

A MOST BRUTAL MURDER

WOMAN STABBED BY HER HUSBAND AT NIAGARA FALLS.

A Boarder Witnessed the Crime—Assassin Crossed the Border But Was Later Captured—The Parties Were Italians

A despatch from Niagara Falls, Ont., says:—"A cowardly murder was committed here on Wednesday evening about 6.30 o'clock, the scene of the crime being in a dingy little frame building in the Italian settlement on First Concession street, back of the Brundage stables, on Ferry street, just outside of the town limits, near the village of Drummondville.

Frank Werke, an Italian labourer, sixty-two years of age, who is known to be a worthless drunken and quarrelsome man, lived with his wife, 50 years of age, in the above-mentioned place. With them lived another Italian as a boarder. The husband spent most of his earnings in drink, and would come home in this condition and abuse his wife, who was a hard-working, thrifty Italian woman, and through her economy and hard work accumulated enough to buy the little home where she was murdered.

STABBED WITH A CARVING KNIFE.

It is supposed Werke came home Wednesday evening drunk and in his usual abusive mood, and in the altercation struck his wife with a knife in the forehead, inflicting two ugly gashes.

She then screamed to the boarder to get up, shouting, "He is killing me." The man, who was in bed asleep, jumped up and ran out to the room where the man and his wife were. He found the woman standing holding a towel to the wounds in her forehead, from which blood was freely flowing. Behind her stood her husband. As soon as he saw the boarder coming to his wife's assistance, the husband grabbed a large carving knife that laid on the supper table, and with a terrific thrust plunged it into the back of his wife's neck.

The woman, with a scream, fell dead upon the floor, expiring in a few minutes.

BOERS' RETREAT FROM ENSLIN.

The London Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Orange river says that after the engagement at Eslin he climbed the kopje where the enemy's main battery has been. He found that a gun pit had been constructed of ironstone boulders, which practically commanded the railway. Fragments of British shells were everywhere.

On the hills were a dozen horses, all of which had been killed by shells.

Inside the fort there was evidence of a hasty Boer retreat. Saddles, overcoats, rugs, and cartridges were abandoned.

A British cavalry cap was found in the fort on the next kopje, where there were over a hundred dead horses.

The correspondent adds that it is impossible to estimate the Boer losses, as they carried off many of their dead, but there was evidence that the British guns had done terrible execution; nearly all the Boer wounded were injured by the shell fire. Packages of dum-dum cartridges were found in several places.

The Daily Mail's correspondent says that the wound caused by a dum-dum bullet is small where the missile enters but where it leaves the body the wound is the size of a five-shilling piece.

BRITISH LOSSES REVISED.

A despatch from London says:—"A revised list of the British casualties at Belmont shows:—Officers killed, 4; wounded, 22; non-commissioned officers and privates killed, 46; wounded, 225; of which number the Guards had 35 killed and 159 wounded.

The revised list of casualties sustained by General Hildyard's forces in their sortie from Estcourt, Natal, at Beacon Hill shows:—Killed, 13; wounded, 64; missing, 1; prisoners, 8.

LANCER SHOT BY WOMEN.

A despatch to the London Daily Telegraph from Eslin says that on Sunday a patrol of the Ninth Lancers rode up to a farm. A number of women outside the house directed a heavy fire against the troops, killing one of them.

CASUALTIES AT MODDER RIVER.

A despatch from London says:—"The casualties in the Modder river battle on Tuesday, so far as known, were four officers killed and nineteen wounded.

The losses among the rank and file have not yet been announced by the War Office, and no despatches concerning the battle from war correspondents have yet come through.

LORD METHUEN WOUNDED.

The War Office announces that Gen. Lord Methuen was slightly wounded at the battle of Modder river. A bullet struck him in the thigh, inflicting a flesh wound.

The officials state that the general's wound is very slight, and that he will probably be all right in a few days.

It is probable that the wound will prevent his being in the saddle, and there is great anxiety to know whether he will be compelled temporarily to abandon the personal direction of affairs. His next in command is Col. Colville, commanding the Guards Brigade. He has a reputation as an excellent officer.

METHUEN'S PROBABLE FORCE.

The original arrangement of Bulwer's troops by divisions and brigades has been materially altered by the exigencies of the military situation. Ladysmith's early peril led to plans being made to send the whole first di-works, with good effect.

"The health of the garrison is good. No casualties to report."

"GOING STRONG" ON THE 24TH.

Capt. Wilson, in a message from Ladysmith, under date of November 24, says:—

"We are going strong. We are still beleaguered. There is intermittent shelling."

DID SOME HUSTLING.

A despatch from Cape Town says:—"While everybody is talking about the good work of the Naval Brigade now fighting with Gen. Lord Methuen, it may not be amiss to tell how they hustled to the front. During the train journey northward there was a serious collision on the Victoria road. Considerable damage was done, and it was necessary to transfer the baggage and heavy guns to a relief train. The marines and bluejackets went to work and made the transfer within four hours. Then they made another start, and reached Belmont in time for the battle.

ANOTHER BRITISH DIVISION.

A despatch from London says:—"Speaking on Thursday at a dinner given by the Scottish corporation, Field Marshal Lord Wolseley Commander-in-chief of the British army, said he had no intention of criticizing anything that had taken place in South Africa, but he would say that this evening it was decided to call out one more division of the second army corps. Perhaps before the week was out, certainly before four or five days, it would be on the way to South Africa.

RECEIVED WITH SATISFACTION.

As men are needed in all directions, Lord Wolseley's announcement that a new division will be embarked without delay has been received with the greatest satisfaction. The transports will soon be returning from the Cape and it is hoped that the men will be despatched speedily.

On this point the Morning Post says:—

"The sooner we can make up our mind as to the magnitude of the work on hand the sooner it will be accomplished."

A HEAVY WAR CARGO.

A despatch from London says:—"The steamer Karamie sailed on Friday for South Africa, taking one of the heaviest war cargoes on record. It includes 40,000,000 rounds of small arm ammunition, 7,000 shrapnel shells, 4,000 lyddite shells, 851 boxes of fuses, 40 boxes of pistol ammunition, and a large number of star shells for discovering the enemy's position at night, and for signalling. Each of these shells contains six magnesium light stars which burn for 14 seconds, and seven stars, which burn from 34 to 36 seconds.

BRITISH LOSSES.

A despatch from London says:—"A full official list of the British casualties at Belmont has not yet been received, and it is awaited with uneasiness, as it is feared that it will exceed the first estimate.

The estimated losses at Belmont, with 195 casualties at the battle of Graspan, or as it is officially called Eslin, brings the total numbers of British killed, wounded, and missing since the beginning of the war up to 2,945 of all ranks.

KRUGER'S PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

A despatch from Berlin says:—"The Deutsche Zeitung claims to have received the following despatch from a diplomatic source:—

"President Kruger and President Steyn instructed Generals Joubert and Cronje, the commanders of the Transvaal and Orange Free State forces respectively, not to split the beleaguered forces, but to strike vigorous blows. Gen. Joubert concentrated three corps, the first at Ladysmith, the second at the Tugela river, and the third to the eastward of the Pietermaritzburg-Estcourt railway to cut off the British retreat."

"Gen. Cronje is operating at Kimberley and Modder river, and in General Lord Methuen's rear."

MURDERER CAPTURED.

Werke, turning to the man, who was completely paralyzed with the horrible scene enacted before him, said, "If anyone asks you who did this, tell them I did." Werke then hurriedly left the house.

The boarder ran to give the alarm, The Ontario police were apprised of the crime, and the two bridges were notified by telephone. The bridge tenders held the man when he attempted to cross the upper steel arch bridge, but let him go before the police got there. He walked across to the American side and Chief of Police Youngs, with a posse of men, went in hot pursuit. He was subsequently captured.

Dr. McGarry, the coroner, was called, and found that the woman's jugular vein was completely severed.

The couple had three grown-up children, one son and two daughters, one of the girls being married to an Italian named Frank in this town.

FRIENDSHIP FOR BRITAIN.

Very Pleasing American Demonstration in London—Ambassador Choate Speaks.

A despatch from London says:—"The annual thanksgiving banquet of the American Society in London was attended by 275 guests, and was marked by enthusiastic demonstrations of friendship for England in the war against the Boers. A striking speech by Ambassador Choate along that line, and the presence of the uniformed nurses and doctors of the American hospital ship Maine, were the features of the occasion.

Mr. Choate, in response to a toast to his own health, which was received with loud cheers, said there could not be a better prelude to what he had to say than a remark that had been made to him: "Let England and America clasp hands across the sea, and the peace of the world is absolutely secure." He referred sympathetically to the losses sustained by the British families through the war, and went on to say:—

"Fortunately, Englishmen have not far to look for living proofs of this human sympathy. Neutral as America must be, her women could not be neutral. To neutralize them would be to spoil them. Those American women in London who have fitted up a hospital ship have done a deed that will live for all time as a blessing to our common humanity."

After declaring that the action of the United States in endeavoring to look after British interests in the Transvaal was merely an endeavor to reciprocate kindness exhibited during the war with Spain, Mr. Choate said:—

"Unfortunately, the local authorities at Pretoria seemed to think that this would not be quite the proper thing. Yet, I can but hope that the prohibition will ultimately be removed so that we may be permitted to act in this errand of mere humanity."

Dr. William R. Brooks, director of Smith Observatory, has just been awarded by the Paris Academy of Science "The Grand Llande" prize for his astronomical discoveries.

The Stormberg mountains are great masses of indurated limestone, with few passes and many precipices. This height at Stormberg Junction railway station is 5,800 feet above the sea. The descent into the plains is zigzag and very treacherous. The whole country will require most careful and systematic scouting.

BOER AMBULANCES.

A despatch from Lorenzo Marques, says:--The Boers at Kimberley report that on November 25 a strong force of the garrison, accompanied by field pieces, made a sortie and surprised the Bloemhof commando. After sharp fighting assistance arrived for the Boers, and the Kimberley garrison retired, covered by a heavy artillery fire. The Boers had nine killed and 17 wounded. Several ambulance trains from Pretoria went in the direction of the Orange Free State. It is evident that heavy fighting is expected in that neighborhood during the coming week.

Everything was quiet on the northern border of the Transvaal last week. The Boers are now preparing to attack Tuli, Rhodesia, where the garrison is busy strengthening the fortification. Traffic between East London and Stormberg is interrupted, owing to the destruction of the Steynsburg bridge.

SEEN BY A TORONTO MAN.

The London Daily News correspondent at Cape Town cables the views of Charles Lewis Shaw, the Canadian journalist, on the battle of Belmont. Mr. Shaw observes:

"How the British scaled the steep kopjes is a mystery. They fought their way up yard by yard. Orders from the officers were unnecessary. The last kopje had been insufficiently shelled when the British reached the foot, so they halted until the artillery somewhat cleared the way. There we lost most heavily, 40 dropping close together. Then, in the face of terrific fire, the kopje was climbed. After five minutes' taste of the bayonet, the Boers fled. The Lancers started in pursuit, but the horses were exhausted. Had there been a couple of cavalry regiments with fresh horses, the rout of the enemy would have been turned into a massacre. I was principally struck by the deadly earnestness of Tommy Atkins."

GATACRE'S ADVANCE,

atacre's force may be slow in beginning operations. The country in which it has to work is excessively difficult and most favorable to the Boers' tactics. Mountains covered with boulders, an admirable shelter for marksmen, and river beds, offering exceptional opportunities for ambushes -- is the nature of the ground. It is eighteen miles from Burgherspruit to Stormberg, and for more than half the distance the road winds between precipitous declivities. There is

KIMBERLEY IS SAFE.

The Garrison Is Now in Touch With the Relief Column.

Gen. Methuen Has Been Reinforced by Three Battalions of Infantry and a Cavalry Corps--British Losses to Date--The Boers are Massed Near Colenso--Methuen Again in the Field.

A despatch from London says:--Despatches to the War Office show that Lord Methuen's last battle was a decided British victory, clearing the Boers from the river and railway line and allowing Lord Methuen to set his engineers at work repairing the bridge, which is essential to the execution of his designs, as without its aid the provisions so urgently needed by Kimberley cannot be conveyed there nor can the refugees be moved back to Cape Town.

There is little doubt that Lord Methuen can now freely pass as many of his troops as he requires across the river. Were Kimberley in danger of being compelled to yield to the Boers, Methuen could advance with the bulk of his force and clear the way, to the beleaguered garrison, with whom he is supposed to be in heliographic communication. It is therefore certain that Kimberley is safe.

The fact of Methuen being reinforced from De Aar by three battalions of infantry and a cavalry corps makes it possible that he may, when he reaches Kimberley, be able to await the completion of Gen. Gatacre's concentration on the frontier and the arrival of Sir Charles Warren's division, his line of communications with the colony being guarded by troops echeloned along from the Modder to the Orange river. When he crosses the Modder river, it is almost certain that he will find the Boers blocking his advance to Spytfontein. It would be difficult to imagine a position better suited for defensive tactics than that in which the Boers are. The partial road which General Methuen must follow, passes through a belt of very broken country. Stony kopjes stretch on each side for four to six miles, an extent of front which will render difficult any turning movement. If the Boers, who hold it, are eventually driven out, they will have Kimberley and its garrison directly in their rear and may lose their guns.

THE SITUATION.

The British losses in the South African campaign to date, from all causes, are put at 4,180, and of these 1,960 are described as missing. These figures are a great jump from those of Nov. 18, when the losses were officially given as 2,779, out of which 1,676 were set down as missing. At the same date the Boer authorities acknowledged to having 1,276 military and 62 political prisoners on their hands, so that with those they have captured since, there must be about 1,500 British officers and soldiers now at Pretoria. That still leaves 400 missing not accounted for.

The reported intention of the British Government to continue pouring troops into South Africa until there are 120,000 men in the field, only shows how much they underrated both the resources and resolution of the Boers.

The Kimberley garrison is now in with 24 and 26-centimetre guns, besides a number of guns of smaller calibre and quick-firing. The supply of projectiles and explosives is said to be ample for a prolonged siege, and the small-arm ammunition that was laid before the war began amounted to 36,000,000 cartridges. In connection with this provision, a curious story is told. About two years ago the Transvaal Government caused inquiries to be made as to the consumption of rifle ammunition by the German army during the Franco-German war, and being informed that the total quantity used was 18,000,000, it was immediately decided to buy in double that quantity.

DISTRESS IN JOUBERT'S CAMP.

The London Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Frere says, under date of November 28:--

"Hundreds of General Joubert's column are ill. Many, having lost their rifles and horses, have returned or foot."

"A few more deserters came in today. They say the Boers are tired of the war, and are starving."

The Boer force at Colenso on November 28 was estimated at 5,000. Several correspondents say that after the British retired there was a tremendous explosion and a cloud of smoke in the direction of the bridge across the Tugela river.

BOERS LOOTING IN NATAL.

A despatch from Frere Camp, Natal says:--"A reconnaissance made on Thursday by General Hildyard and Lord Dundonald's command, the fact of which has already been cabled, gave an excellent opportunity for studying the country. On approaching Colenso the British found on every side scenes of devastation that testified to the thoroughness of Boers' looting. The Williams farm and others had been sacked from end to end. In some cases the contents of every room of the farm-house had been destroyed. The Boers had evidently burned what they could not carry off. The poverty of the Boer commissariat was testified to by the corn husks that were to be seen about the deserted camp fires of the enemy."

The wreck of the armored train still visible, showed that a Boer shell had broken an axle, which had obviously caused the accident to one car that lay on its side. The other car was upright, but both were completely riddled by the enemy's artillery fire.

Two graves near-by bore the inscription, "To fallen soldiers."

The main Boer force is now apparently not far from Chieveley station

Death by Starvation of Three Men Who Found Rich Diggings.

A despatch from Vancouver says:—
The steamer Danube, from Skagway, brings news of death by starvation of
M. C. Daly, of Boston, and two French-
men. Last fall two Americans named Lawler and Smithson formed a partnership with the other three. About Christmas they began to stake ground on Bonanza river. A blizzard came on.
Daly and the two Frenchmen became separated from the other two, and were lost. They wandered away without provisions, and with scant clothing and blankets, and a single tent. After the storm Lawler and Smithson followed their footsteps in the snow. They found messages written on trees telling a sad tale of privation and suffering. A few days later their camp was found.

On the ground, his form wasted to a mere skeleton, was the corpse of one of the Frenchmen. The kettle on the camp stove contained a frozen mass of rawhide thongs of snowshoes, which the men had attempted to use for food. Daly's body was found a short distance away, and securely buckled around his hollow ribs was a buckskin belt containing $1,000 in gold dust, with a scrawled note that they had found rich diggings. Lawler will leave here in a few days for his home in New York.

LANDSLIDE IN BENGAL.

Eleven English Children Were Among the Victims.

A despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says:—The steamship Warrimoo, from Australia, brings details of a great landslide in Darjeeling, Eastern Bengal. A group of villages on the mountain side were destroyed. Fifteen English children in the house of Missionary Finlay, of Australia, were buried alive. Mr. and Mrs. Lindeman, Mrs. Finlay, the Misses Soundry, and Mrs. Reed worked four hours digging out the children's bodies. Four of the fifteen were saved. Three hundred native men, women, and children were killed.

Stockers are a slow sale at from $2.25 to $3 per cwt. The Buffalo market is still off.

Export bulls, feeders and springers are just about the same as on Tuesday.

Ewes were weaker to-day, and sold at from 3 to 3 1/4c per pound.

Lambs were steady at from 3 1/4 to 3 5/8c per pound.

Bucks are unchanged in price.

A few extra choice milkers are in demand.

Good veal calves are wanted.

About 1,500 turkeys were received.

There is no change in the price of hogs. Choice hogs, scaling from 100 to 200 lbs., are selling at $4.25 per cwt.;
thin hogs sell at $3.75, and fat hogs at $4. per cwt.; stores are not wanted.

BUT ONE ANSWER.

If a man uses the contents of his pocket-book wholly to replenish his stock of tools, to build fine convenient barns, leaving his unhandy patched-up house for his wife to furnish and ornament with rag carpets of her own manufacture, broken furniture glued together and upholstered by her overburdened hands, can he expect her to keep in touch with the inventions and improvements of modern times? Can she be well versed in current literature, or even have time for the pleasant greeting or friendly chat that help him to forget his labors and overcome the anxieties of his daily toil? If he appropriates the daily paper and reads to himself alone, while his tired wife clears away and washes the supper dishes, and plies her needle till the wee small hours in trying to relieve her overburdened work-basket of its worn-out garments that require patch upon patch to render them wearable does it conduce to make that cheerful atmosphere that should surround a home and enliven the household? If he refuses to go to the social gatherings of his neighbours in company with his wife and characterizes those that go to picnics or any place of amusement, as idiotic, while he and his wife stay at home and grow rusty for lack of social friction, how can they acquire that culture and discipline that comes from contact with the many-sided world?

CHRISTMAS CAKE.

Almond Cake.—Cream half a cup of butter and a cup and a half of sugar; add half a cup of milk, 2 cups of flour, the whites of 4 eggs, and a teaspoonful and a half of baking-powder. Bake in the pans used for jelly cake. Make an icing with the whites of 3 eggs and 3 table-spoonfuls of sugar. Blanch 1 pounds of almonds, and chop half of them almost to powder. Mix with a little of the icing, spread it between the layers, then cover the whole cake with the remainder of the icing, arranging halved almonds on the top and sides.

Nut Fruit Cake—Cream 2 cups of sugar and 1 of butter; add 6 well-beaten eggs, 4 cups of flour, 1 of cold water, 1 of hickory-nuts, one-half pound of raisins—seeded, finely chopped, and dredged with flour—1 teaspoonful of soda dissolved in hot water, 2 of cream of tartar, and 1 grated nutmeg.

Chocolate Cake—Cream 1 cupful of butter and 4 of sugar, add 3 well-beaten eggs, 4 cups of flour, 1 cupful of sweet milk, 1 teaspoonful of soda, 1 of cream of tartar, two-thirds of a cake of chocolate dissolved in water, a cup of boiling water. Put this in just as the cake is ready for the oven, stir thoroughly through the mixture, and bake.

Angel-Cake—The ingredients needed are the whites of 11 eggs, a tumbler and a half of sifted granulated sugar, a tumbler of flour three times sifted, fruit juice or cold water, half cup each of molasses, brown sugar and cider vinegar, two-thirds cup melted butter, one beaten egg, half cup rolled cracker crumbs, one cup chopped and seeded raisins, one tablespoonful cinnamon, one teaspoonful each of cloves, allspice, nutmeg, salt and black pepper, citron, if you like it. Stew the raisins in the water a few minutes, add the molasses and sugar, then vinegar, etc., and lastly a wine-glassful of grape juice. Use cold.

Turkey Dressed With Oysters.—For a 10-pound turkey take two pints of bread-crumbs, half a cupful of butter, cut into bits, not melted, one teaspoonful of powdered thyme or summer-savory, pepper, salt and mix thoroughly. Rub the turkey well inside and out with salt and pepper, then fill with first spoonful of crumbs, then a few well drained oysters, using about a pint for a turkey. Strain the oyster liquor and use to baste the turkey. Cook the giblets in the pan and chop fine for the gravy. A fowl of this size will require three hours in a moderate oven.

Delmonico Potatoes.—Cut cold boiled potatoes in one-half inch cubes. To two cubes allow one and one-half cups sauce made of one and one-half table-spoonfuls of butter, the same amount of flour, one quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper and one and one-half cups of milk; arrange alternate layers of potatoes, sauce and grated cheese in a buttered baking dish. Cover the top with buttered cracker crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven twelve or fifteen minutes.

Simple Custard.—Put eight crackers in a deep dish, pour enough warm water or milk over them to just cover them, and when soaked, about ten minutes, sprinkle with sugar, cover with cream, garnish with preserved peaches, pears, or quinces and serve.

POINTERS FOR WASH DAY.

Wash fabrics that are inclined to fade should be soaked and rinsed in very salt water, to set the color before washing in the suds.

A very hot iron should never be used for flannels or woolens.

Calicos, ginghams and chintzes should be ironed on the wrong side.

Clotheslines, are made much more durable by boiling for ten minutes before they are used.

Table linen should be ironed when quite damp and ironed with a very hot and very heavy iron.

Embroideries should be ironed on a thin, smooth surface, over thick flannel, and only on the wrong side.

Linen may be made beautifully white by the use of a little refined borax in the water instead of using a washing fluid.

Silk fabrics, especially white silk handkerchiefs, should not be dampened, but ironed with a moderately warm iron when taken from the line.

Irons should not be allowed to become red hot, as they will never retain the heat properly afterward.

TERRIBLE INDEED.

Cost In Blood of All the Wars Since the Days of the Trojans.

Beginning with the Trojan War, which is usually regarded as the first chapter in European and Asiatic history, it is calculated that war has claimed 40,000,000 of men every century. In Europe alone the loss in lives every 100 years since the date of that war has been between 18,000,000 and 20,000,000. Three thousand years have elapsed since that opening chapter of history was unrolled, so that during those 30 centuries the almost inconceivable

Sole Survivors of The Brussels Ball.

Near Kilkenny, Ireland, on the banks of River Nore, lies Woodstock, the vast estate of Lady Louisa Tighe, and here, surrounded by every luxury and loved and honored by all who know her, lives the daughter of the Duke of Richmond, who almost a century ago buckled on Lord Wellington's sword when he left Brussels on the campaign which amazed the world.

Dominated by its superb baronial mansion of granite, hewn and carved on the estate, Woodstock extends over a circuit of forty miles, and its walks, roads and drives, extend five hundred miles. Connected with the estate are some curious privileges, among which is the right of tenants to lay all their grievances or disputes before the lord of the manor—not entering the house to do so, but standing in a courtyard directly outside of the study window.

At a fixed hour every morning, Sundays excepted, the late Colonel Tighe always made his appearance, being under unwritten bonds never to refuse the request of the widowed or the fatherless, while the tenants were pledged to abide by his decisions, as they now are by those of Lady Louisa, well aware that so considerate and humane a "chateleine" can only decide for their present good and future welfare.

Twice a year Lady Louisa has the right to free two criminals, even at the very gallows steps, and she has always exercised this privilege wisely. How she deals with dishonest persons is shown in an instance in her own household a few years ago.

As was the yearly custom at Woodstock, Lady Louisa was entertaining members of the royal family, and had a large house party in their honor. Conversation turned one evening upon some of the very curious and rare gems which had come to Her Ladyship from the Duke of Richmond, especial reference being made to a black diamond, the only one of its kind in the world.

The guests expressing a desire to see this diamond, the steward was sent for the cases—rarely opened—in which it and other unique jewels reposed. The man trembled and turned pale, but brought the cases, only to have it discovered that the black diamond, the Duke of Richmond's watch, an heirloom of inestimable value, and several other rare and historic gems were missing. Further search revealed that the silver chests had also been tampered with.

The suspected man broke down and confessed his guilt, but, throwing himself on Lady Louisa's well known clemency, he was punished only by dismission and an injunction to leave that part of the country forever.

The drive from Innistagh to Woodstock is over a fine country, richly timbered and prosperous. Miles of stone terraces and several lodges are passed before the grand gateway, surmounted by a lion and griffin, is reached. Passing the fine lodge, an avenue two miles in length, leads to the mansion, an immense granite structure, its countless windows giving character to the somewhat severe lines, and the entrance suggesting a royal welcome.

Within, the grand hall and stairway form a sumptuous setting for any scene, and in summer, when the gardens are ablaze with almost tropical bloom, the lower doors and windows reveal a scene which a Claude or Vermeer might have been glad to depict. In these famous Woodstock gardens are terrace upon terrace, and bank upon bank of lavish color, while each stone in the marble terraces is from designs of Daniel Sullivan—each different, and each representing some striking or famous scene in different nations of lovely and high born wife. There is the Silver Spring, a bubbling well water, justifying its name, icy cold, translucent and singularly refreshing, from which each morning two pairs are carried three miles for Her Ladyship's use. To maintain Woods costs £3,000 every day.

THE SHOP WINDOWS.

One Among the Manifold Attractions Great City.

"Surely one unfailing delight great city," said a stranger, "must its shop windows. I should think would never get tired of looking them."

The stranger was right; they are a delight and people never do them, and the city dweller pause to look at the novel and varied and beautiful displays with even greater frankness than the visitor does wants to see these things and he no hesitation about stopping to at them; not the slightest fear anybody will think him gawky. Things are put into the window be looked at, to invite attention, if they interest him he stops looks.

Putting out of the question the plays of articles of feminine apparel and of goods for such use, which specially attract the attention of men, it may be said that, taking time with another, many men in front of the sporting goods store, where guns and fishing rods that sort of thing are seen, to the things there displayed an dream of vacation times and when they shall exchange work the crowded, roaring streets of city for woods and fields and sp brooks. There are many love nature, people of all ages, grown as well as children—who stop in of the bird store windows to look the birds, and they stand and them earnestly; there is something about the birds that draws them; love to look at them.

It would cost a lot of money to the flowers of which one may the sight for nothing, by simplying in at the windows of the flower shops. He may not get the old them through the plate glass window but he can stand within a foot of most gorgeous blossoms, and feast eyes, at least, upon their beauty many people do just this; and wouldn't follow that they were able to buy them if they wanted. Perhaps the greater number of who stop could not buy the ones, anyhow; but they all stop because the flowers are beautiful; and it may be observed that specimens that are thus placed in window to attract attention this free display are likely to choice specimens, to make the at the more striking, which is that the passerby who pauses to gets not only a free view of thing of beauty, but the things he is thus enabled to see free are best of their kind.

There are windows for the young as well as for the old; dolls and toys that sort of thing; wondrous displays that are fascinating to the beholder. There are displays of and of food in many forms that gratify the epicure and delight eye of all; and as for various ar teaspoonful of soda dissolved in hot water, 2 of cream of tartar, and 1 grated nutmeg.

Chocolate Cake—Cream 1 cupful of butter and 4 of sugar, add 3 well-beaten eggs, 4 cups of flour, 1 cupful of sweet milk, 1 teaspoonful of soda, 1 of cream of tartar, two-thirds of a cake of chocolate dissolved in water, a cup of boiling water. Put this in just as the cake is ready for the oven, stir thoroughly through the mixture, and bake.

Angel-Cake—The ingredients needed are the whites of 11 eggs, a tumbler and a half of sifted granulated sugar, a tumbler of flour three times sifted, a teaspoonful of vanilla essence, a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, sifted. The tumblers should contain two gills and a quarter. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, then add the sugar lightly, then the flour gently, and lastly the essence of vanilla. Do not stop beating until you are ready to put the mixture into the tin, which should be one of those with a tin in the middle, sometimes known as "Turk's head." The pan should be greased. Bake forty minutes in moderate oven. If still soft when tried with a straw, let it bake longer. When baked, turn the tin upside down on saucers to cool. Cut with a very sharp knife. The same receipt may be used for sunshine-cake by adding 6 of the yolks of the eggs, well beaten, after beating the whites and the sugar together.

White Cakes—One cupful of sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one-half cupful of milk, one-third cupful of butter, and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add the whites of three eggs beaten stiff at the last. These cakes are the small round kind we enjoyed as children, and still notice as we pass the baker's window. They should have, some of them gay red tint, others pure white and still others a festive blue. The colorings are harmless, and the cakes very attractive. The ice cream is often appropriately served with the pudding, and then both the jelly and the cakes would be omitted, or the patriotically tinted cakes could grace the festive supper-table.

Let your linen, silver, glass and china be as handsome as you can afford, and irreproachably neat, however simple. Have the dining-room comfortably heated; especially see that the air there is fresh. Festive decorations will add to the happiness within. Little holly with its gay berries is very cheery. For a centerpiece, use a Christmas lily, a graceful fernery or thrifty house plant. Bunning and ground pine are inexpensive. Garnish the turkey, salad, etc. Enjoy the bountiful feast. Forget this one glad day thy burden of care and try to make the anniversary mean all that we know it can.

DOMESTIC RECIPES.

Bread Griddle Cakes.—One quart milk, two cups stale bread crumbs, half cup flour, tablespoonful melted butter, three eggs, teaspoonful salt, two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Add the butter to the boiling milk, turn it over covered; beat to a smooth batter, add the salt, yolks of eggs well beaten, then the flour and baking powder, lastly the whites of the eggs, beaten stiff. These cakes are also made of sour milk, in which the crumbs are soaked over night, and a teaspoonful, level, of soda used to correct the acidity of the milk. In this form stale bread may be utilized without a suspicion of its identity, and the result is more palatable than the usual bread puddings of the economical housewife.

Cranberry Pie.—Wash the cranberries, chop them or cut in two with a knife; stir with them a cup of sugar and a heaping tablespoonful of flour; put into the pie-tin previously lined with crust, add half a cup of water and cover with a top crust into which you have rolled some bits of butter.

Beginning with the Trojan War, which is usually regarded as the first chapter in European and Asiatic history, it is calculated that war has claimed 40,000,000 of men every century. In Europe alone the loss in lives every 100 years since the date of that war has been between 18,000,000 and 20,000,000. Three thousand years have elapsed since that opening chapter of history was unrolled, so that during those 30 centuries the almost inconceivable number of 1,200,000,000 men, women and children have been sacrificed to settle disputes concerning some few miles of territory, to gratify the ambition of some monarch, or to soothe the wounded vanity of rulers and states.

The present population of the globe is estimated at 1,400,000,000; therefore, if all people alive at this moment were stricken down simultaneously by some fell disease the awful result would be but little more terrible than the result brought about by the wars of the centuries.

In the war that raged between 1783 and 1815 no fewer than 1,900,000 men were either killed outright or died from wounds and disease. In the campaign of 1828 the number was 120,000. In the Crimean War the losses sustained by the four countries which participated amounted to the terrible figure of 600,000. In 1859 the French and Austrian forces suffered to the extent of 63,000, while in the Civil War in the United States the victims numbered 65,000. The Franco-Prussian War caused the death of 250,000 and the Russo-Turkish War meant death to 180,000 men.

In order to show the fearful carnage that may be wrought in one battle two instances in recent wars are cited. In the Battle of Gravelotte in 1870, the combined losses of the French and Germans were 44,000 men killed, and in the two chief attacks on the stronghold of Plevna, so gallantly defended by the Turks under Osman Pasha, the Russians and their allies lost 30,000 men, independent of those who died from wounds after the battles.

WOULD GO AFTER IT.

During the last Transvaal war, by some chance or another, the Boers managed to capture a flag from the English. Of this feat they have always been extremely proud, and have never lost an opportunity of boastfully showing the same to any English who might be visiting the Transvaal. During the Queen's Jubilee of 1897 an opportunity presented itself to the Boers of making known their magnanimity. President Kruger, on behalf of his countrymen offered back the flag which had been taken from the English in the last war. In reply, the English government thanked the Boers for their courteous offer, but begged to say that when they required their flag they would go and fetch it.

NOT A VIOLENT CASE.

Mrs. Peck—Henry, what would you do if I were to die suddenly?

Henry—Pray, don't talk of such a thing. I think it would almost drive me crazy.

Mrs. Peck—Do you think you would marry again?

Henry—Oh, no; I don't think I would be as crazy as that.

Within, the grand hall and stairway form a sumptuous setting for any scene, and in summer, when the gardens are ablaze with almost tropical bloom, the lower doors and windows reveal a scene which a Claude or Verne might have been glad to depict. In these famous Woodstock gardens are terrace upon terrace, and bank upon bank of lavish color, while each stone in the marble terraces is from designs of Daniel Sullivan—each different, and each representing some striking or famous scene in different nations of the earth, while far as the eye can reach billows of green and bloom extend, with walks laid out in every fashion, reaching to what are known as the "Silver" and "Gold" sand beaches viewed by old Lady Louisa from her library window, and near which is an exquisite fountain.

Not far away is a tree of enormous growth, which the Society of Forestry takes pride in, as it is the only one extant in the European world. It was brought from Egypt, and in Oriental lore is known as "The True Lovers' Tree," from a peculiarity in the foliage. On being touched the leaves curl up softly, as though in gentle response to the hand caressing them.

Nearby is the shooting tower, building overlooking the wide preserves. Though deer are killed by the hundred, only the right side of the animal is ever cooked and eaten at Woodstock. It is supposed this custom arose from the fact that in generations gone by a favorite animal was accidentally wounded on the left side, and its owner declared that henceforth in the length and breadth of Woodstock no deer should ever be shot or harmed unless the sportsman touched the right side.

On this portion of the grounds alone two hundred men are employed, and on what is called the "Home Farm," adjacent, three hundred men work daily in all seasons, while more than one hundred women and girls are hired simply to gather the fallen leaves and weed garden beds, Lady Louisa being, even in her extreme old age, ardently interested in her own sex. These workers, in order to preserve a picture effect, are costumed at Her Ladyship's expense in a uniform of green and white, made in the most becoming peasant style. The skirts, of shamrock green, are pinned back over skirts of a darker hue, and the bonnets are of plaited straw of the quaint cottage pattern, tied under the chin.

In all of the six lodges at Woodstock, the persons employed have been chosen with a direct view toward giving them especially appropriate occupations. Women who are compelled by loss of fortune to become self-supporting are installed, while the various buildings erected on the grounds also typify Lady Louisa's philanthropical mission in life.

Red House, one of these dwellings, is kept entirely for the use of privileged sightseers, who, however, must arrange their dates some time in advance and have their names duly registered. They are received in a fashion unknown to any other show place I have ever visited. A luncheon is served. They are waited upon in every way, and should they desire it can take a shift and go out upon the water.

Near by is Tiddington Cottage, where the gamekeeper resides—well cared for like all others in Her Ladyship's employ. Beyond is the woodranger's, near which is a stream, which is carried five miles to supply Woodstock with water.

Not far away is a curious spot, known as "Lizzie's Lawn." Here stand on a rich sward four arbor vitaeas of enormous size, which can be seen for miles around, towering high above the branches of the forest itself. These were named for the four sisters of Colonel Tighe.

Turning down this leafy walk or that, one comes upon exquisite bowers, all appropriately named—the Lennox, the Richmond, etc.—and all testifying to the fondness of Colonel Tighe for his

• MTCAPS FOR GRANDMA.

Every year, as long as the dear wo man lived, I used to knit her two nightcaps, one of white cotton for summer, and of bright worsted for the colder months. My mother once knit her one of thread, but that was beyond my childish fingers.

The number of stitches is determined by the size of the thread. Cast on enough to make the strip of work four inches wide. Knit one, put the thread over, widening one, and leaving an eyelet, and narrow, or knit the next two as one. Continue to end of needle, turn and do the same. When the strip of "open work" is fifteen inches long, slip and bind off the stitches. This is the front, or body, of the cap.

For the crown, knit a strip about eight inches wide to a depth of nine inches. When an inch from the end, narrow at the beginning and end of every needle six times, to round off the corners before binding off the top of the crown. With darning needle and similar thread, sew the crown into the front, fulling it slightly at top and sides. A narrow box-pleating of washable ribbon around the face and neck is left with ends to tie in bow-knot under the chin.

Garters knit from white domestic yarn with tassels of the same are also valued by an elderly woman.

RUINING COSTLY GUNS.

One great disadvantage of smoke less gunpowder, tending to offset its many advantages, is its corroding action on the interior of a gun. Professor Roberts-Austin recently made a report on the subject, showing that fine weapons are liable thus to be quickly ruined.

A PARALLEL CASE.

The Case of R. A. Wade, the Criminal Lawyer of Chicago, Duplicated by That of an Ontario Lady.

Wade's Sight Was Restored by Dodd's Kidney Pills—Mrs. Geo. Barnes Was Not Only Short-sighted, But Deaf—Part of a Box of Dodd's Kidney Pills Restored Both Sight and Hearing.

Smith's Falls, Dec 4.—The case of R. A. Wade, the great criminal lawyer of Chicago, is at present exciting considerable attention in the United States, many of the papers of that country having devoted considerable space to it. A similar case has occurred on our own side of the line, in that of Mrs. George Barnes of this town.

R. A. Wade is the lawyer who defended Prendergast the first time he stood trial for murdering Carter Harrison, Mayor of Chicago. He had been retained in a number of sensational trials before and has been since, and is one of the best known lawyers in America. He contracted Kidney Disease and the uric acid, always present in the system when the kidneys are deranged, attacked his eyes and Mr. Wade went blind. He started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and gradually the kidney trouble disappeared and his sight returned.

Now read Mrs. Barnes' letter and see how what was almost considered a miracle by the people of Chicago has been duplicated in Canada.

Well Worth a Visit.

The life size and cabinet photos now on exhibition in Hulett's studio are marvels of the photographic art. All his cabinet photos are done in the latest Paris finish and no one can afford to miss the chance of securing photos at the holiday rates. A magnificent large picture and frame given with each dozen cabinet photos. Owing to the rush of holiday work Mr. Hulett will not complete the souvenir group of the business men of the town until after the holidays.

A Desirable Change.

GENTLEMEN WHO ARE BALD.—A great many think it is impossible to replace their former growth; these thoughts would be at once expelled from their minds should they see and investigate the Art Hair Coverings manufactured by Prof. Dorenwend, whose skill in this line is world-renowned. Over 37,000 wear his Art Productions. They are feather-weight securely adjusted, durable, and a great protection to the head against cold, catarrh and other ailment, and give a much younger appearance. He is at the Paisley House, Napanee, on Friday, Dec. 14th. Don't miss seeing his goods.

Interesting to Policy Holders.

Albert J. File, M.D., of Prince Edward County, took out a fire insurance policy with the London Mutual Fire Insurance Co., in August 1897, for $600. On the 8th of September, 1897, the property covered by the policy was destroyed by fire, and he brought action against the company to recover the amount. The defendants showed, however, that he had not paid his assessment within thirty days, as required by the conditions inserted in the policy, and had allowed it to lapse. This morning Mr. Justice Falconbridge handed out judgment dismissing his action with costs. —Toronto News, Dec. 1st, 1899.

Chas. Fralick Arrested.

Chas. Fralick, proprietor of the Union hotel, Williamsburg, was arrested in Kingston, on Saturday, on a charge of murder. He appeared before the magistrate and to the charge of "unlawfully slaying and killing one John James on November 15th," he pleaded "not guilty." B. M. Britton, Q. C. conducted the prosecution. Only two witnesses were examined—John Purdy, county constable, and Dr. Wood, their evidence being the same as given at the coroner's inquest on November 15th. The magistrate committed Fralick for trial at the spring assizes. Bail was accepted at $2,000. J. W. Fralick and Charles Fralick each giving surety for half of this amount. This action has been taken by the Attorney General's Department on account of the number of stories afloat concerning the shooting affray.

Ladies, Bear in Mind

We draw special attention to the visit of Prof. Dorenwend to Napanee who will be at the Paisley House Friday, Dec. 14th, with a large selection of styles in Hair Goods, such as Ladies' and Gents' Wigs, Toupees, Bangs, Long Switches, etc. His Hair Coverings are worn everywhere, and the satisfaction obtained by these who adopt them, are health, comfort and younger appearance. DON'T MISS this chance. Why look careworn through the loss of Hair when Prof. Dorenwend's Art Goods can improve your looks? He will demonstrate this to every caller free of charge.

Canada To The Fore.

One thing Canadians can boast of over their American cousins is the fact that Canada has a bigger, better family paper with more subscribers than any paper across the line. We allude, of course, to "The Family Herald and Weekly Star" of Montreal, which is read in Canada alone by over half a million people each week. The immense increase in the "Family Herald's" subscription lists this year is a great tribute to it and is due to some extent to the two handsome pictures, "Battle of Alma" and "Pussy Willows," both of which are included in the year's subscription. Can our American friends show a bigger dollar's worth? We think not.

Wedding at Northport.

Our quiet village was agreeably surprised by the arrival of a bridal party in the person of Mr. T. J. Osborn, of Empey Hill West and Miss Jessie Adell Bowerman, of Lonsdale and others. The Rev. Mr. Brown, a cousin of the bride, who was engaged to perform the ceremony, was not at home, delaying the parties until 4:30 p.m. A sumptuous repast was prepared by Mrs. Brown, and at the arrival of Mr. Brown all sat down to do ample justice to the wedding feast. Having finished, the guests retired to the parlor, where the ceremony was performed. After the usual congratulations were offered by the guests, the wedding party dispersed, and the happy couple left for their home.

conducted the prosecution. Only two witnesses were examined—John Purdy, county constable, and Dr. Wood, their evidence being the same as given at the coroner's inquest on November 15th. The magistrate committed Fralick for trial at the spring assizes. Bail was accepted at $2,000, J. W. Fralick and Charles Fralick each giving surety for half of this amount. This action has been taken by the Attorney General's Department on account of the number of stories afloat concerning the shooting affray.

A Drowning Fatality.

A sad drowning fatality is reported from Amherst Island. On Friday morning at six o'clock, Mrs. McPhee, aged seventy, her son and Miss Moreland, aged eighteen, put out in a skiff from Salmon point lighthouse, which they keep, and headed for Amherst Island. They carried with them some bedding and other articles, as they live on the island during the winter. The sea increased in motion as they proceeded and soon the skiff was overturned. The man clung to the boat but was unable to help the two women. The skiff and the clinger were washed ashore. When the steamer Hero arrived at the island from Picton before noon Capt. Bloomfield was informed of the affair, and when opposite Salmon Island lowered a life boat and went over to the island. No trace of the missing women could be found and they must have been drowned. The owner of a steam yacht was in the vicinity just after the capsizing occurred and saw two women near the shoal, evidently clinging to the bedding. The sea was too heavy to permit of the steam yacht going near the shoal.

The bodies of Mrs. McPhee and granddaughter, Miss Moreland, aged seventeen, drowned Friday last crossing from Salmon Island lighthouse to Amherst Island, were found at seven o'clock Sunday morning washed up on the south east shore of Amherst Island. They were close together when the searchers came upon them. The father of Miss Moreland is keeper of the lighthouse on Salmon Island and was about moving back to Amherst Island for the winter. He prepared a boat load of stuff and with it dispatched his daughter and her grandmother, sending Archibald McPhee over in charge of it. He saw the frail craft swamped after it had proceeded a short distance from the island. The storm arose suddenly, throwing the craft into the trough of the sea. As soon as McPhee came to the surface he caught hold of Miss Moreland and hauled her across the upturned boat, but she was washed from his hold. A second time she was pulled up on the boat but next time she was washed off she disappeared and was not again seen until her fair form was found on Amherst Island shore. Last February a son of Mrs. McPhee and brother of Archibald McPhee, mysteriously disappeared from his home on Wolfe Island and two weeks later his body was found on the lake shore.

Dec, 28th.

Annual Entertainment.

The annual entertainment for a special fund of St. Mary Magdalene's church, and which is always looked forward to with so much pleasure will take place at the Opera House on Thursday evening, Dec. 28th, when a particularly attractive programme will be offered. Grenville Kleiser, of New York, whose versatility has won the highest praise from both Canadian and American audiences, will give several of his clever dramatic impersonations. Mr. Robert Harvey, Kingston's favorite pianist, has promised his services. Mr. Charles Harvey, whose fine bass voice made him so popular on his former appearances here, will contribute vocal solos, while local talent will be supplied by Mrs. Burritt, whose name has only to be given to secure a good house.

A Gift to Give.

It is often difficult to decide what to get your friends for holiday gifts. Here is a suggestion:

"Good morning, Jennie, I have brought you a nice present," said Gertrude, as she handed her friend a neatly wrapped package.

The pale, weary looking girl, who was slowly recovering from severe illness, opened the bundle and held up a large bottle of clear, rich medicine.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla!" she exclaimed. "I have been reading about it to-day and wished I had a bottle."

On New Year's Day Jennie was able to be on the street, and to her friends who remarked how well she was looking she simply said, "Hood's Sarsaparilla," and every one of them knew it was this great medicine that had given back her health.

Society Function at Tweed.

A brilliant social function took place in the Robertson parlors there on Friday evening last when the young Misses were at home to upwards of fifty of their friends. The evening was spent in progressive games, character studies, music and promenades, the whole concluding with the grand figure march of Sir Roger de Coverley. The prizes in the progressive games were won by Miss Saura Mouch and Mr. Gus Meram, while the character studies pronounced the honors of (Belle) upon Miss Helen Graham, and of (Gallant) upon Mr. Geo. Rathbun. Miss Bertha Huyc contributed some most exquisite music, and in leading the selections for the promenades and marches ensured their pleasure and success. A happy feature of the evening was a short extempore address on Patriotism by Mr. T. T. Bower and the lusty singing of the national anthem that followed it. The committee, who so creditably managed the event consisted of Misses Helen Graham, Ethel Gilbert, Lizzie Morton, Korme Comer, Ethel McWilliams, Jennie Rayburn, Lela Huyc and Pearl Barnett, assisted by M. McCann, Houston, Clapp and Bertha Huyc.

Peck's Bad Boy.

This funny play was produced opera house here on Wednesday last. The Warden of the county Allison, Esq., extended an invitation to commissioners and county officer present, and a majority of the attended. The show was anything good, but a few hearty laughs were some of the ludicrous situations.

The Christmas Globe.

This beautiful production is to have may be had at the office of this price 50c. Besides the book itself, is a work of art as to illustrations and arrangements, there are seven pieces well worth having. That of the 48th of Highlanders, in 14 colors, is admired by everyone while those Redvers Buller and Col. Otter, are smaller, of equal merit. The number a whole is cheapness itself.

The Gentleman's Game.

A meeting of the executive of the Curling Club was held in Mr. Alexander's office on Tuesday afternoon. Arrangements were made for the season, and the rink is now being prepared under the supervision of an committee. It is the intention of the get up a cup for local competition. neighboring clubs have been regarding same. The secretary Alexander, is in correspondence with the parties concerned.

A Pretty Wedding.

On Wednesday evening the residence of Mr. Herman Ming, Reeve of North Fred- ericksburg was the scene of an interesting event, it being the marriage of Miss Lottie M. Ming to Mr. Hiram Cline, a prosperous young farmer, of Richmond. The bride looked very handsome in a gown of white organdie trimmed with valencien- nes lace and white satin ribbon, and carrying a bouquet of white carnations. The maid of honor were her two little nieces Mabel and Maud Hurst. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Limbert in the presence of about forty guests. After the usual greetings the guests sat down to a sumptuous repast. The bride received many costly and beautiful presents. The groom presented the maid of honor with carved bracelets. The EXPRESS wishes the young couple a happy and prosperous journey through life.

I. O. O. F. at Deseronto.

A few weeks ago the members of Deseronto Lodge I. O. O. F. extended an invitation to the degree teams and members of Napanee Lodge to visit Deseronto and exemplify degree work. On Wednesday evening the brethren to the number of about forty, journeyed to Deseronto, and on arrival were met by members of Deseronto Lodge and escorted to the I. O. O. F. hall. The degree teams then took charge and conferred degrees on a number of candidates. After the degrees were conferred the members of Deseronto Lodge invited the Napanee brethren to the Deseronto house where mine host Mr. Hatch had prepared a banquet in every way worthy of the occasion. When the good things provided had been disposed of an hour was spent in conversation and toasting, the chairman Mr. A. Richardson, in a neat speech proposed the health of the Queen, after which all present rose and sang the National Anthem. The next toast was the health and prosperity of Napanee Lodge No. 86, which was replied to by short speeches by Messrs. F. W. Vandusen, Harry Smith, G. F. Ruttan and Revs. White and Peck. Mr. H. Aylsworth then rendered the solo "Soldiers of the Queen," which received much well merited applause. Mr. G. F. Ruttan proposed the health of Deseronto Lodge, which was replied to by Mr. G. W. Wright. Last, but not least the chairman proposed the health of host and hostess, after which the Napanee brethren started for home, arriving there in the wee small hours of the morning. The Napanee brethren speak in high terms of praise of the Deseronto brethren and the reception and banquet tendered them.

"SUFFERED UNTOLD MISERY."

South American Rheumatic Cure Thwarted Disease and Cured Him Outright.

Robert E. Gibson, merchant, Pembroke, says that ten years ago he contracted rheumatism of a very severe type, suffered untold misery—resorted to fly-blisters and other severe treatments with no lasting good or relief. When hope of recovery was well nigh gone he was induced to try South American Rheumatic Cure. The first dose gave him instant relief, half a bottle cured him outright. His only words were: "It is the best rheumatic remedy on earth." Sold by Dutton & Wallace.

The Best Name.

When writing verses, dear, to you,
As swallows come, I often do,
No matter then what name I use.

To keep you in a fair discharge,

From idly prying public eyes,

There is one privilege I choose—

Whatever name or time or line,

You bear I still must call you mine.
